

LOGAN'S UPPER CAROLINA.

Proof That His of the Second Volume is Extant.

To the Editor of The Sunday News: The writer has read with the highest satisfaction the tribute to Gen. McCrady for his History of South Carolina by Prof. R. Means Davis, of the South Carolina College, in your last Sunday's issue. Reference is there made to Logan's Upper Carolina as follows:

"Logan's story did not catch the ear of a public already hastening on to an era of military strife, and the author, disappointed by this cold reception, is said quietly to have suffered a second volume and a mass of precious material to sink into oblivion. The report has been current that his material was lent to Lyman C. Draper, the historian, of King's Mountain, and by him bequeathed to the Historical Society of Wisconsin, along with much other valuable records. No verification has been secured of the story, and it is probable that the manuscript second volume must be numbered among the lost books of the world."

Perhaps it may be thought egotistical, but as few are left in Charleston who were in active life in the 1850-60 period, it may serve a good purpose for me to narrate what took place in those years in publishing home books.

Some older citizens will recall the "Broad street book store," conducted by my elder brother, the late S. G. Courtenay, and myself for ten years before the "War between the States." There was, it is true, a general indifference to book publishing, and the old established book sellers acquiesced in the quiet routine of selling books printed elsewhere.

The then youngest book sellers did, however, initiate a systematic publishing business of home books as a bibliography of their numerous publications in that period will attest! The writer may furnish such a list some day. He proposes to give here a narrative of Mr. Logan's Upper Carolina History and tell where the manuscript of the second volume can now be found!

It was, as near as memory serves me, in the fall of 1859 that a stranger came to No. 9 Broad street and asked to see the proprietor. He introduced himself as Mr. Logan, of I think, Abbeville. He stated that he had prepared a history of upper Carolina, had been in the city three weeks and, after laying the matter before the several older book-sellers, and failing to secure a publisher, had been recommended to come to us, the younger book-seller. He had with him the manuscript of the first volume and said it was ready for the press. It was suggested to him that he leave the manuscript with us, that I would request the Hon. Wm. J. Grayson, a daily and always welcome visitor at our book store, to read it and if he approved we would submit a business proposal for its publication.

He did so. Mr. Grayson read the manuscript, recognized its value and commended its publication. Terms were satisfactorily made and in the spring of 1860 the volume was issued. It was so successful that by the fall of that year the cost had been entirely refunded and small balances on the credit side were accruing monthly; when, first, the terrible excitement of the presidential election, later Secession and war, of course, ended book-publishing and book-selling. My nicely bound copy of "Logan" went the way of a good many other precious things when Gen. Sherman burnt Columbia, in order to save the "Union," and I have had to use a borrowed copy since, as have never been able to procure one. It was a business success.

Having described the fortune of Volume One, I am able to add a correct account of Volume Two. When I changed my residence to this Cherokee region I missed my "Logan," but I had the use of the late Judge Norton's copy and read it, after the lapse of thirty-three years, with great satisfaction. I made very general inquiry about the manuscript of the second volume, but without success. I had a visit three years ago from an old resident in this "Upper Carolina," and he was looking over my books and remarking upon them when I asked him about Logan's Upper Carolina, and what had become of the manuscript of the second volume, which, the author had told me, in 1859, could be made ready for the press in a month.

My visitor seated himself and said: "When Mr. Lyman Draper, of Wisconsin, was travelling through upper Carolina, gathering original material for his invaluable book on 'The Battle of King's Mountain,' subsequently published, our people gave him very freely of original documents, which he would express to Madison, Wis., when his trunk got too full.

He spent some days with —, in Abbeville County, and his host, besides giving him quite a number of old papers of historic value, finally handed Mr. Draper the manuscript of Logan's second volume. I do not give the names of my informant, or the donor as likely to be an unpleasant record." Mr. Draper passed away. He had bequeathed a very large number of original manuscripts, books, pamphlets, etc., to this grand society, which he had founded and made of large influence. It had been a labor of love with him for a life time.

As I had been a correspondent of Mr. Draper in his life time, and hold an honorary membership in the "State Historical Society of Wisconsin," on his nomination, I therefore wrote to the librarian, and have his answer, saying that Logan's manuscript, Vol. 2, was on file there, and that permission would be given any properly accredited person to copy it. So my much appreciated friend, Prof. Davis, is now assured that the publication of Vol. 1, was a success, not a failure, and that the original manuscript of the second volume extant.

It seems so strange that a prominent Carolinian would give away to a stranger a precious historic document. But that had been the custom for fifty or more years, it apparently not being considered possible that our annals had any value to our own people.

Will you let me close this simple narrative by remarking that our Carolina people yet remain very indifferent to their home books. It will hardly be doubted that there must be an average of fifty people in each of the forty counties of South Carolina with ample means to buy "McCrady's History." This would mean two thousand copies sold at home and would give remuneration to the author.

It will be found on inquiry that the figures of South Carolina sales are very, very far short of that number. It is never too late to mend. Let us all, from now on, take more interest in home books. No one can read "McCrady's History" without obtaining highly valuable information and having a higher regard for those gone before. W. A. C. Newry, S. C., November 21, 1901. Can Spell 15,000 Words. Lancaster, Mo., Dispatch Nov. 24.—Professor D. Jones, now teaching a district school near here, has issued his annual challenge to any person on earth to spell against him for the championship of the world, a title which Prof. Jones has long been conceded by the best spellers of the West. The following conditions are attached: Contest to last four hours, words to be English, pronounced by a disinterested person, words to be reduced in writing, both contestants spelling the same words, the one missing the least number of words to present the other a Webster Unabridged dictionary.

Professor Jones has outspelled every man and woman in the West who has met him in competition, has humbled a learned professor of Kansas University and any number of close students of Webster in Missouri and other States. He has been known to spell correctly 15,000 catch words without a single miss.

Cures Eczema and Itching Humors through the Blood—Costs Nothing to Try. B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) is a certain and sure cure for eczema, itching skin, humors, sores, scales, watery blisters, pimples, aching bones or joints, boils, carbuncles, prickling pain in the skin, old eating sores, ulcers, etc. Botanic Blood Balm cures the worst and most deep-seated cases by enriching, purifying and vitalizing the blood, thereby giving a healthy blood supply to the skin. Other remedies may relieve, but B. B. B. actually cures, heals every sore, and gives the rich glow of health to the skin, making the blood red nourishing. Especially advised for old, obstinate cases. A READING LESSON.

N. C. Schaeffer in "Thinking and Learning to Think"

The teacher had called the class in Second Reader. As soon as all pupils were seated, she said, "You may read the first paragraph." Instead of reading orally, the class became so quiet that one might have heard a pin drop. After most of the hands were raised, she called upon one pupil to tell what the paragraph said. The second paragraph was read, and the substance of it stated in the pupil's own words. An omission was supplied by another pupil; an incorrect phrase was modified by giving the correct words for conveying the thought. In the course of the lesson it became necessary to clarify the ideas of some. This was accomplished by a few pertinent questions, which made the pupils think for themselves.

After the entire lesson had been read in this way she dismissed the class without assigning a lesson. Every member of the class went to his seat took out his slate, and began to write out the lesson in his own language. The interest and pleasure depicted in their faces showed that it was not a task but a joy to express thought with the pencil. The teacher had given them something to think about; she had taught them to express their thoughts in spoken and written language. Her questions had stimulated their own thinking; and when, later in the day, the lesson in oral reading was given the vocal utterance showed that every pupil understood what he was reading. There was no parrot-like utterance of vocables, but an expression of thought based upon a thorough understanding and an appreciation of what was read. The silent reading was an exercise in thought-getting and thought-begetting; the language lesson upon the slate was an exercise in active thinking through written words; and the oral expression furnished a test by which the teacher could ascertain what she had accomplished in getting her pupils to think.

Beauty in School Work. If the measure of a man's religion is his daily life, the measure of a pupil's culture is his daily work. Let us not deceive ourselves with the notion that a well-decorated school-room and an hour a week spent in drawing or picture study is exalting the aesthetic standards of the pupil, although the work of his hands is just as slovenly and bungling and artistic as ever. When the beauty of the world has entered our souls, the beauty within will manifest itself in beautiful deeds. —Henry Turner Bailey.

HATCHESBURG, A. L., June 30, 1875. Dr. C. J. MOFFET—Dear Sir: I can assure you that your TEEHINA (Teething Powders) is indispensable to us, and in no single instance has it ever proved a failure. We have tried soothing medicines, and everything known to us and "old women," and your Teething Powders are pre-eminently a success and blessing to mothers and children. Yours truly, etc. J. M. Will Be a Boss Yet?

There is a Detroit boy, as the story comes, who is going to make his way in the world. He entered a store and going up to a man, who proved to be the proprietor, said to him determinedly: "Mister, do you want a boss?" "What's that?" asked the astonished man.

"I say, do you want a boss?" "I don't understand you; what do you mean?" "Well, it's this way: For three weeks I've been looking for somebody who wanted a boy, and as I can't find him I concluded that I'd try to get a place as a boss. I'd like to be a boss."

"I rather like this," said the man, admiringly. "How would you like to work up to the job of a boss? It took me twenty-five years to do it."

"I'd like it mighty well," answered the boy. "I'm only too anxious to try it. Will you give me the chance?"

The merchant gave him the chance, and to-day that fourteen-year-old boy is working in the shipping room of a large mercantile establishment. He says confidently that he will be the boss before he has gray whiskers, and his employer is inclined to agree with him.—Youth's Companion.

"I had long suffered from indigestion," writes G. A. LeDeis, Cedar City, Mo. "Like others I tried many preparations but never found anything that did me good until I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. One bottle cured me. A friend who had suffered similarly I put on the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. He is gaining fast and will soon be able to work. Before he used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure indigestion had made him a total wreck. McMaster Co.

About Children Reading.

What should children between six and twelve years of age read?

Answers to this question have lately been given by Kate Douglas Wiggin, Mary Mapes Dodge, Edward Everett Hale, Horace E. Scudder, Agnes Repplier, Tudor Jenks and others, together with some extremely sensible and interesting suggestions as to the principles underlying the choice of children's books. Here is a single typical list from the ten included in the article which The Outlook publishes in the Annual Book Number. The list is that furnished by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, editor of St. Nicholas.

- 1. "Alice in Wonderland." 2. Hans Andersen's Fairy Tales. 3. Hawthorne's "Wonder Book" or the "Tanglewood Tales." 4. "Gulliver's Travels." 5. Kipling's "Jungle Book." (or Seton Thompson's "Wild Animals I have Known," or Harris's "Uncle Remus.") 6. Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast," (or Nansen's "Farthest North," or Kennan's "Tent Life in Siberia.") 7. Scott's "Ivanhoe" (or Howard Pyle's "Robin Hood," or Lauzier's "The Boy's King Arthur") 8. "Eye-Spy," or some other good nature-book. 9. Cooper's "Leather Stocking Tales," (or Stevenson's "Kidnapped") 10. Scudder's "Children Cook" (or Miss Repplier's "Book of Fables Verse.")

"Patrick, the widow Maloney tells me that you stole one of her finest pigs. Is it correct?" "Yes, yer honor." "What have you done with it?" "Killed it and ate it, yer honor."

"Oh, Patrick, Patrick! when you are brought face to face with the widow and her pig on judgment-day, what account will you be able to give of yourself when the widow accuses you of stealing?"

"Did you say the pig would be there yer reverence?"

"To be sure, I did."

"Well, then, yer reverence, I'll say, 'Mrs. Maloney; there's yer pig.'"—Baltimore Sun.

HOME AND CHILD

Does your horse "feel his oats"? What a difference between the grain-fed and the grass-fed horse! The first strong and full of ginger, the second flabby, weak and tired out before he begins. The feeding makes the difference.

Children are not alike either. One is rosy, bright-eyed, full of life and laughter, another is pale, weak and dull. The feeding again is responsible.

Sickly children need special feeding. They don't "feel their oats". Scott's Emulsion adds just the right richness to their diet. It is like grain to the horse. The child gets new appetite and strong digestion.

Scott's Emulsion is more than food. It is a strong medicine. It rouses up dull children, puts new flesh on thin ones and red blood into pale ones. It makes children grow.

Scott's Emulsion makes ordinary food do its duty.
