Fourth Anti-Slavery Lecture, at the Tabernacle, TUESDAY EVENING, Dec. 19, by WILLIAM WELLS BROWN, a Fugitive Slave. Subject: "Our National Character, and how it is viewed from a distance." Mr. Brown was a Delegate to the Peace Congress in Paris, in 1849, where he received the warm congratulations of Victor Hugo, the Abbé Dugnerry, Emile de Girardin, Richard Cobden, and many others of no less celebrity, for his speech upon "The War Spirit of America, which holds in bondage nearly four millions of his brethren." After spending five years in Great Britain, during which time he addressed more than one thousand public meetings, and commended himself to the confidence of the best men in that country, he has returned to his native land to devote himself to the work of an Anti-Slavery Lecturer. He is the author of a volume just published in Boston, entitled "Sketches of Places and People Abroad," of which The Tribune said, on Tuesday last, that, "without respect to its authorship, the volume is far superior to the ordinary run of books of foreign travel." Admittance 25 cents.

Temperance Rejoicings.—TO THE TEMPERANCE COMMUNITY OF NEW-YORK AND VICINITY—A few weeks since we, the undersigned, invited you to assemble at the Broadway Tabernacle to ratify the nominations made by the State Temperance Convention for the offices of Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. You nobly responded to our call. AN ADMIRABLE GIFT BOOK FOR YOUTHS.
THE ROMANCE OF THE REVOLUTION:
A HISTORY OF THE PERSONAL ADVENTURES, HEROIC EXPLOITS, AND ROMANTIC INCIDENTS OF THE WAR OF INDEPENDENCE.
This volume fills a place not occupied by the usual histories of the Revolution. It is a picture of the individual exploits, toils, and adventures of the people, and thereby affords a much more vivid and graphic picture of that era than can be obtained from any other source. It has the merit of possessing all the fascination of a romance and the fidelity of a history. Beautifully illustrated.
In extra gilt sides and edges, price $2; plain edges, $1 50.

"This is one of the sweetest, most tender, most entertaining novels that we have ever read."

A M A B E L,
A FAMILY HISTORY.
By MARY ELIZABETH WORMELEY.
This volume is from the pen of a DISTINGUISHED AMERICAN LADY.
ITS HIGH LITERARY EXCELLENCE,
ITS SINGULAR POWER, ITS MANIFOLD BEAUTIES, ITS POSITIVE GENIUS,
are acknowledged by all who read its pages.
THE PRESS EVERYWHERE APPLAUD IT,
and comment upon its sweetness, its tenderness, its originality, its command over the feelings, its dramatic interest, its elevation of purpose, and its comprehensive scope.
BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM FAVORABLE NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
From The Albany Argus.
"There is a charm in this tale that's irresistable."
From The Albany Knickerbocker.
"A tale of sentiment, beautifully told."
From the Puritan Recorder.
"Stamped with more than ordinary genius."
From The Albion.
"The idea of Amabel is excellent."
From The Charleston News.
"A truly beautiful and artistic tale."
From The Highland Courier.
"It is perfect as a work of its class."
From The Boston Herald.
"It is decidedly one of the most powerfully interesting stories of the season.
From The Boston Chronicle.
"The work abounds in brilliant passages, and in scenes of enthralling interest."
From The Christian Enquirer.
"A story of heart-joys and trials, not without stirring incidents and romantic turns."
From The N. Y. Journal.
"Some splendid writing gives to its scenes the greatest dramatic force."
From The N. Y. Day Book.
"The story throughout is well written, and full of vivid touches of passion."
From The N. York Daily Mercury.
"Every sentence is stamped with the seal of artistic beauty and great and good thoughts, richer than sybilline utterings, are scattered like pearls upon its pages."
From The Hartford Courant.
"There is much to praise in this powerfully written novel. The characters are well drawn, especially that of the tender, impulsive, ingenuous heroine."
From The Sunday Atlas.
"This is one of the sweetest, most tender, most entertaining novels that we have ever read. We recommend it to every lover of the truthful and beautiful."
From The New Bedford Mercury.
"It will take its place among the few select fictions which are secured for favorite passages, and admirable views of life and character. The story is admirable in its tone, and very interesting."
From The Home Journal.
"Amabel is far above the range of ordinary fiction in style, sentiment and scene. It is written with rare vigor, strength, and clearness of purpose. The style is admirable."
From The N. Y. Dutchman.
"The style is easy, graceful and winning; the plot natural, yet novel; the characterization bold and artistic; and the groupings masterly. It cannot fail to elicit the admiration and good wishes of all cultivated minds."
From The Newport News.
"This story is remarkable for the intensity of the sentiments it embodies, for its vigorous and polished diction, great range of scene and character, and for originality and energy."
From The Sunday Dispatch.
"Although love—the universal staple of novel writers—is the active element, the work betrays such a thorough knowledge of human nature, and especially of that most difficult study, a woman's heart, the diction is so vigorous and polished, the style so lively and yet so intense, and the plot so complex and yet so originally and ably developed, that it may be called with truth a work of genius."
From The Commercial Advertiser.
"The originality of this story, both in design and treatment, is very striking. It is a fascinating story, written with a dramatic power very rarely exhibited in the productions of female writers. We venture to predict that many a reader will rise earlier in the morning, and later at night, to prolong the day on which he enjoys its deeply interesting pages."
Published in one elegant 12mo. vol., 470 pages. Price $1.

"It will survive the Century that produced it."
A GRAND NOTICE from a GOOD JUDGE.—The Editor of The Newark Daily Advertiser thus speaks of THE NEW SOY:
"It is not an easy matter to give a just idea of the character of this book, neither is it easy to pronounce an opinion upon its merits. Still we are ready to say that it is a work that many thousands will read, and one that will survive the century that produced it. It is unquestionably a work of great power, which absorbs the attention while reading, instructs by its suggestive affinities, while its pictures linger in the mind, prompting to good actions, to kindlier judgements and less worldly pursuits.
"Should we follow the promptings of our own minds, we should continue this notice to many times its length, giving a resumé of the book, our feelings while reading, and its literary character, &c., and then perhaps be dissatisfied that, in addition to this we had not read the entire work aloud to ten thousand readers. We will, therefore, but state our high appreciation of the volume, which, we think, must have come from some practiced pen conversant with city life; but we are unable to attribute it, with any probability of correctness, to any one in particular. It contains passages having a familiar resonance, which reminds one of Melville, although it cannot be his, of the author of The Attorney, which is possible; of Cornelius Matthews, and we are assured it is not his. At any rate it would disgrace no living writer. * * * * * However, if they be not all 'Bobs,' we shall look upon the poor barefooted urchins beneath our window with more consideration and sympathy, and we think others will do the same. In our opinion, this work will do more for their real benefit than all the societies as they now consist, for it will bring both money and workers into these societies, and their efficiency will be more than doubled, and the numberless half fed, poorly housed and parentless boys, hangers on of the printing offices, will have reason to bless the author of 'The Newsboy.'"

NOW READY.—RUTH HALL.
BY FANNY FERN.
Price.....$1 25.
For sale by Booksellers and Periodical Dealers, generally.
The following are brief extracts from notices by the Press, of advance copies, and afford some indications of the quality of this book:
"It is such a story as no one could produce who had not genius of a high order. * * * It requires no gift of prophecy to predict that it will produce a sensation. It is a work distinct with genius; it deals in no abstractions, but with the living realities of the present time, and of this, our own land." [Phil. North American.
"Here is a remarkable book—a book to create a profound sensation. We have read it through—the volume of 400 pages, in six consecutive hours. * * * The story is told with extraordinary power and interest. There are passages in Ruth Hall equal in tragic description to anything in the works of Dickens. It is a book that will make a sobbing among mothers and widows, and cause a general sighing over the sins of the rich and sufferings of the poor." [N. Y. Mirror.
"Never did a tale abound in so many beautiful images, and so skilfully-drawn pictures of the heart. * * * Destined to be one of the most popular works ever issued from the American Press." [Phil. Mercury.
"It will be read with avidity, and extend the author's merited popularity." [N. Y. Journal of Commerce.
"If any doubts have existed in the minds of Fanny Fern's readers as to her being a woman of genius, Ruth Hall will dispel them. * * * No one will fail to read the book through, who reads the first chapter." [N. Y. Courier.
"It is beautifully written, and possesses absorbing interest." [Pennsylvania Inquirer.
"A hasty glance over it did not suffice—we have perusedit leisurely, as we seldom do ordinary books handed us for notice. * * * Fanny Fern's novel is a complete success, and will be more widely read than either volume of her sketches." [Utica Daily Observer.
"The admirers of Fanny Fern, and their name is legion will find in this book ample amends for the silence she has maintained during the last few months. It is indeed, the most brilliant performance she has yet achieved." [Phil Saturday Courier.
"It is a book that will make a sensation." [Syracuse Chronicle.
"Ruth Hall is a great advance upon anything Fanny Fern has heretofore written." [Buff. Daily Republican.
"As every body will read Ruth Hall, we will not say more than that we read it through last night—every page of it, and feel well repaid for the time." [Balt. Patriot.
"We do not hesitate to say that it is destined to create a sensation." [N. Y. Sunday Times.
"Fanny Fern seems in reality to have eclipsed her previous fame, great as that was. * * * It will be sought for and read all over the land—in the mansions of the rich, and the quiet country house of the farmer. It will become a sort of household god, and many will be the sympathizing and gentle heart that will beat in unison with that of the heroine." [N. Y. Atlas.
