American Widows' Relief Association of the City New-York—Designed principally to relieve famine-stricken families reduced from comfort, and, in many cases, from affluence to a state of terrible destitution.

During the last month, we have furnished food and clothing to many families whose sufferings are almost inconceivable.

These families are destitute through want of work. That cause still continues. Many of them have lived all through the winter by pawning their clothes. They can live so no longer—they have nothing more to pawn, and they cry to us for food. They cannot live without further aid, and their native American pride revolts against begging.

To save three women and fatherless children from such a fate we must have money. We also want Clothing, Dry Goods, Shoes, Stockings, Bedding, Provisions. Such donations may be sent to the Office of the Secretary, No. 114 Greene-st. We appeal with confidence once more to a generous public. We know the object is one of the most worthy of all charities.

REPUBLICATION of MISS AUSTEN'S NOVELS.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE.

By Miss Austen.

Author of "Sense and Sensibility," "Emma," "Northanger Abbey," "Persuasion" and "Mansfield Park."

In one volume, 12mo., 326 pages; cloth, 75c.; paper, 50c.

Published this Day:

MISS AUSTEN'S CELEBRATED NOVELS have been out of print for some years in this country, and the undersigned propose to republish them complete in uniform style.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE is now just issued, and it will be followed in due time by her other works.

Miss Austen is emphatically the novelist of home. She was the founder of the domestic novel, and although many of her followers have achieved brilliant successes, yet to this day Miss Austen remains undisputed mistress of the path which she struck out for herself. The truth, spirit, ease, and refined humor of her style, have never been equaled. Her descriptions are so perfect, her characters so genial and truthful, and her incidents so unexceptionable, that we rise from the perusal bettered by the task, and more lenient toward our common humanity.

STANHOPE BURLEIGH:

THE JESUITS IN OUR HOMES;

A NOVEL. BY HELEN DHU.

Price $1.

The irresistible interest excited by the publication of this work continues to make an altogether unexpected demand upon the publishers aware, as they were, of the uncommon power and freshness of the theme selected by the author, to enforce her views upon the attention of society. Still, they have made such arrangements as will enable them to supply the demands of the public without delay. The fact that a portraiture of political movements is given, and with all the charms of fiction, to fasten the realities of society in the mind, has created unprecedented attention for this writer, and she is likely to affect the course of public events for some years to come, more than any other person not professedly devoted to political life. And the critics are all anxious to prove who this powerful writer is; is HELEN DHU a nom de plume? and if so, is it the production of a Lady, and is she single? The Troy Budget takes up the question: "It is said to have been written by the Hon. J. T. Headley. At all events it is written in Headley's graphic and spirited style," and The Rochester American, pursuing the subject says: "The author under her nom de plume conceals a courageous soul and a bold heart, while she wields a graceful pen;" and The Boston Bee decides: "Whoever wrote it, its literary merits are very high," and The Auburn American says: "Miss Dhu has written the most remarkable book of the age. The New-York Times reports that "her powerful production has the indorsement of Sam;" and The Virginia Herald pronounces it "A thrilling romance, though it is not a creature of imagination." The Episcopal Recorder supposes: "The author, if we can judge by the style, is Mr. C. E. Lester" and The Christian Secretary thinks "that it is evidently the production of a man." And also, The Detroit Democrat and Inquirer, on this theme, remarks: "It is a bran an allegory than a history, and the style and sentiments of the work decidedly masculine." The State of Maine observes: "There is a certain degree of intensity and energetic force about its pages—we do not now recall any American work resembling it;" and The Hartford Courant concludes: "It is ably and powerfully written; it will have a prodigious sale." &c., &c.

INITIALS.—A LOVE STORY.—THE INITIALS.

EQUAL TO WALTER SCOTT'S NOVELS.

Read what The Boston Olive Branch, of Feb. 24, says of it, in their editorial columns:

"This is one of the most charming books of the day, and we think it must fascinate all lovers of good stories. It is a romance of German life, and gives graphic pictures of the homes and hearts of that country. The author is an English lady of high rank, but a long residence in Germany has enabled her to portray the manners and customs of the people with great fidelity and skill. Many of the characters are studies. Hildegarde is certainly one of the most attractive persons we have found in any modern fiction; so beautiful, so true, so self reliant, she forms a striking contrast to the susceptible, volatile, and coquettish Crescence. Madam Rosenberg the officious, scheming step-mother; Major Stutte, bending over his beer, and endeavoring to keep up with his young bride-elect, in the tedious ascent of the mountains; Count Rodmitz, with his musings for the water-cure; the two boys, plotting their mischievous pranks, and Hamilton, the tutor, are no ordinary portraitures. The narrative is full of incident, and the interest admirably sustained, from beginning to end. The book has passed through several editions in England and will no doubt be extensively circulated here. We are happy to see it in the neat and permanent form in which Mr. Peterson has issued it."

Complete in two volumes; paper cover, price One Dollar; or bound in one volume, cloth, for One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents a copy.

"Nothing exhibits more strikingly the wonderful progress of the age than the appearance of such a book—a State, an Empire was created yesterday. Here is the first chapter of its history to-day.

"We commend the volume as filled with reliable statements, and as adding an interesting page to geographical knowledge." [Chicago Journal.

"Their travels through Kansas occupied several weeks, and extended not only through the settled portions, but far into the wilds of the Rocky Mountains. They are evidently gentlemen of intelligence, and their observations upon the resources of the country, its mineral, agricultural advantages, etc., cannot fail to prove valuable to those who contemplate a removal thither. On the point of routes, locations, preemption of lands and cost of travel, the information is very copious." [Chicago Democratic Press.

"Drawn so comprehensively and distinctly and written in so lively a spirit and style, as to meet satisfactorily the wishes of every reader." [Boston Congregationalist.

"The best work out." [George Walter, Esq., Master of Emigration, New York Kansas League.

"For all who are going there—for all who have friends to go, or on their way thither—and for all who, neither going in the flesh nor in the spirit, have yet an interest in the future and in the hopes of Kansas—this is a book to be read." [New Bedford Mercury.

In a letter recently received from Amos A. Lawrence, Esq., Treasurer of the Emigrant Aid Society, Boston, he says:

"The object which I have in writing is, in the first place to express my thanks for so truthful, so spirited, and so elegant a work."
