Letter from Dr. Horace Webster, President of the New-York Free Academy:

DEAR SIR: I had the pleasure, a day or two since, of visiting your school, and of passing through your rooms appropriated to Educational purposes.

You have provided all the conveniences and many of the elegancies desirable for a complete Institution of Learning. I was pleased with everything I saw, particularly so with your Gymnasium, where your scholars are required to exercise each day sufficient to keep them in good health.

You are aware, I have no doubt, that many schools are quite deficient in this particular. In yours, this deficiency is entirely obviated, much to your credit. Your plans throughout exhibit much forecast, in the arrangement of your rooms and course of study.

The appearance of your scholars satisfied me that their physical training had produced marked beneficial effects on their health and intellectual vigor.

I have no doubt, from what I saw on my visit to the Metropolitan Academy, that your instruction is thorough and extensive. Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

HORACE WEBSTER.

PRACTICAL LANDSCAPE GARDENING.—By G. M. KERN. Containing 22 Illustrations and Plans for Laying Out Grounds, with full directions for Planting Shade Trees, Shrubbery and Flowers. 1 vol. 12mo. Price, $1 50.

The author of this work has had excellent opportunities for acquiring a knowledge of the profession of Landscape Gardening in the Jardin des Plantes of Paris, and in the gardens of St. Cloud and Versailles. Several of his performances in the vicinity of this city are well known and justly admired. In the work itself will be found all the rules that are necessary to give the student a knowledge of the art, together with such illustrations and plans as will render the rule perfectly intelligible." [Daily Commercial.

After a long and careful criticism of the writings, in which great praise is bestowed on Loudon and Downing, the editor of The Louisville Courier goes on to say of Mr. Kern's work, that "it is worthy to stand by the side of any of its predecessors in the field of taste. Mr. Kern has an active mind, keenly alive to the beauties of nature, and the perfection of art, and his long apprenticeship in that renowned school the Jardin des Plantes, in Paris, gave him rare opportunities for cultivating his native powers and ornamenting them with those acquisitions that make the accomplished master in matters of taste and rural science. No one can long work hand-in-hand with Mr. Kern without being satisfied that he is in the hands of one who is worthy of all confidence as a guide in the intricate, but pleasant path he betrays him.

"That department of Mr. Kern's work which is devoted to principles of the art, is fully up to the demands of the subject. Nature is held up in all her beauty and strength as the model of the landscape gardener, and the principles of utility, congruity, and of the difference between landscape and pleasure gardening, are presented in phases of reasoning that will command attention.

"In this portion of the work the labors of Mr. Kern are in the highest degree commendable. The elements of the principles of the art are treated under the forms of principles and uses of planting—the necessity of looking at the natural growth on the place as a leading feature for study, the advantages of grouping masses'—shape and character of outlines of groups—the margin or ascending oblique lines—effects of similar shapes, leaves and tints of trees—harmony and contrasts. Beauty of a grove—its character—single trees—detached clumps, flowering shrubbery, and flowers in the scenery. WATER—Lake, pond, stream or brook—character of water in the scenery—giving imaginary extent to the lake or pond—fountains, lawns. ON THE CHOICE FOR A SITUATION FOR A HOUSE. Convenience, shade and shelter, shape of the ground, convex, concave, plane, aspections of the surface of the ground. ROADS AND WALKS—Rock work, architectural ornaments. FREEDOM OF VIEWS—Exterior and interior views, way to secure them. Prospect towers. Sources of pleasure in landscape gardening—unity and harmony—scale and proportion.

"After these extended preliminaries of principles, Mr. Kern enters upon a full and satisfactory explanation of practical operations under the heads of planting, lawns, moving ground, roads and walks, water, rock work, working plan, and a list of trees and shrubs used in landscape gardening, evergreens, deciduous trees, climbing shrubs, fine flowering shrubs, shrubs requiring peat or bog earth.

"The second part of the work is devoted to ORNAMENTAL IMPROVEMENTS. In this department there are eleven figures, designed for a private residence in the city, double house in the city, residence
