A New Work, by the Author of Minnie Gray.
TEMPTATION;
Or,
THE UNKNOWN HEIRESS.
By the Author of Amy Lawrence, Minnie Gray, Woman and Her Master, &c.
Complete in one Volume, without Sequel.
Price, 50 cents.
This is another work from the pen of "Amy Lawrence" and "Minnie Gray," and in all the elements of a good work of fiction it is second to none which that talented author has written. It is full of life and interest, and is written with delicacy, purity and vividness.
The story is deeply interesting and most powerfully written, and evinces a knowledge of the workings of the human heart, and of the world, that is not often met with, but which we were led to expect in this author, from a recollection of the excellence of his former productions. To give even an outline of the story would occupy more space than we have here at command, and all we can do, therefore, is to refer the reader to the book itself. GARRETT & CO.,

A GREAT BOOK FROM THE PEN OF MRS. GORE.
The distinguished Authoress of the "Banker's Wife."
MAMMON;
OR,
THE HARDSHIPS OF AN HEIRESS.
BY MRS. GORE,
Author of "Banker's Wife," "Abednego," "Heir of Selwood," etc.
In one volume 12mo., Price in Cloth, $1; Paper Covers, 75 cts.
Published this day from an advance English copy.
This is the latest production from the pen of Mrs. Gore, and many of the English Press accord it the high praise of being the best.
From The Athenæum.
"The idea intended to be worked out, is the impoverishing nature of a love of money. The author shows how it eats out all geniality, all kindliness of nature—destroying the very power to enjoy the much beloved riches, even when they fall in golden showers without stint or limitation. The character of John Wooleton, of Wraysbury, is evidently a study from life—carefully finished and elaborated; it is exceedingly well done. The gradual choking up of all his faculties with gold dust—the rusting and blunting of all his mental gifts and natural affections—are excellently brought out; and John Wooleton, of Wraysbury, may stand for a type of the intense vulgarity of selfish prosperity. * * * * * *
In conclusion we must say that we prefer 'Mammon' to either of Mrs. Gore's other novels."
From The Press.
"'Mammon' is written with Mrs. Gore's usual vivacity. The novel is exhilarating in tone, and exhibits the follies and weaknesses of life in a spirit of playful sarcasm. The scenes of many colored life carry forward the story with animation, and broad dramatic sketches of society give reality to the whole composition."
From The Sunday Times, London.
"Mrs. Gore's style is always animated, light, and playful. It is sustained by originality of thought, and sparkles with satirical allusions. Her new romance exhibits English manners at the present day. It is thoroughly amusing, and is written with force and point."
From The Observer.
"Mrs. Gore is certainly foremost among the female novelists of the day, for wit, acuteness of observation, for originality of remark, and generally for her graphic powers. These qualities ornament 'Mammon' in profusion."
BUNCE & BROTHER, Publishers,
No. 134 Nassau-st., New-York.

Second Edition—Now Ready,
BLACK DIAMONDS;
OR, HUMOR, SATIRE AND SENTIMENT,
TREATED SCIENTIFICALLY,
By PROFESSOR JULIUS CÆSAR HANNIBAL,
Of The New York Picayune.
12mo. 335 pages, and 6 Illustrations. Price, paper cover, 75 cents; Cloth, Gilt, $1.
The press throughout Europe and America have pronounced these lectures to be the most witty, quizzical, quaint, odd, original and funny of any papers that have appeared on this side of the water.
The lectures must not be considered by any means a burlesque upon the practices of religion. The religiously inclined will find nothing to jar upon their feelings throughout the entire book.
Notices from the press testifying to its original and amusing character pour in from every quarter. We append a few:
The Knickerbocker Magazine says: "They are brim full of quaint satire, and as to the style in which they are written it is such an imitation of the peculiar language of 'men of color' as has never been approached by any writer. To those who would secure many a hearty laugh, and not a little downright wisdom, indirectly and quaintly enforced, we cordially commend these Black Diamonds. The work is well illustrated."
The Dutchman says: "The man who can be seen for the first week after reading Black Diamonds, without a continual grin, must have a command of nerve possessed by few. No one ought to undertake to define wit and humor until he has digested the Diamonds."
"There is really a true vein of sense and knowledge running through and enriching all his writings, that must lead the thinking to enjoy them truly." [Westchester Herald.
"The author is an unrivalled humorist in his views and has a rare talent for catching and reproducing the comicalities of the negro character." [Morris & Willis's Home Journal.
"It is very funny and amusing reading and will please a large class. The book is extremely cheap for $1. Those who buy it must read but little at a time for fear of 'busting up.'" [Sag Harbor Jonathan.
"We have read his piquant lectures for three years, and his wit, humor, and originality seem truly inexhaustible." [Ladies' Paper, Edinburgh.
"They are immeasurably superior to anything of the kind ever attempted." [Reynolds' Miscellany, London.
"We do not believe that any book so full of genuine humor has ever been published." [Henry Ancker Gray's Journal, N. Y. Dispatch.
"Professor Hannibal, like Chawles Yellowplush amuses his readers by his shrewdness and wit, and suggests a train of thought which his grotesque humor seems to have no connection with." [Sunday Courier.
"Here is a book full of fun, a dollar's worth of laughter. Mr. W. H. Lewison is the fountain of that Ethiopian humor which has overflowed the country of late years. It is he who supplies colored minstrels with some of those conundrums, jocular dialogues, burlesque orations, and funny lectures which appear to flow spontaneously from Sampey's lips, but which are in reality written and bought and carefully rehearsed. There is genuine humor in these lectures, and they have that in them which not all comic publications possess—the power of provoking tons of laughter." [Life Illustrated.
"This is a volume overflowing with fun and philosophy. It is just the book for the times, as however dull business may be, none can read it without forgetting their cares and 'saving in' to a jolly fit of laughter and good humor." [Am. Pick.
"The lectures in this volume are irresistibly comic in their character. The wit is genuine, fresh, sparkling, effervescent and natural." [Sunday Times.
"If the reader is fond of genuine humor, wit, and sentiment, he will be sure to enjoy himself hugely over this volume. Though Mr. Hannibal is an African, and preaches in a peculiar dialect, he never offends by vulgarity nor blasphemy, and applies the lash gently to the shoulders of vice." [Atlas.
"All who can appreciate wit and humor find it here. Follies are hit off with a merciless power, and the person who reads them is not likely to be troubled with indigestion for a long while." [Day Book.

ZSCHOKKE'S HISTORY OF SWITZERLAND.—C. S. FRANCIS & Co. publish This Day,
THE HISTORY OF SWITZERLAND, FOR THE SWISS PEOPLE. By Heinrich Zschokke. With a Continuation to the year 1848, by Emil Zschokke. Translated by Francis George Shaw. With a Map. $1.
TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE:
"While studying the History of Switzerland on Swiss soil, I was charmed by the simple beauty, the conciseness and impartiality of Zschokke's popular work, which is used as a textbook in many, if not all of the confederate Cantons; and, with the assent of Pastor Emil Zschokke, of Aarau, the worthy continuer of his late father's labors, I made the following translation from the most enlarged edition.
"Having myself felt a want of information on the subject, I now present this translation to my fellow citizens in the hope that a more extended acquaintance with the history of our elder Republic, may teach us to shun the perils through which the Swiss people have passed at the cost of so much suffering, and aid us to appreciate our own more favorable position as a nation."

KEY TO ROBERTSONIAN SYSTEM OF TEACHING FRENCH—12mo., 75c.
This system has met with the most extraordinary favor throughout Europe, and the present work applied to teaching French by Professor Robertson himself, is believed to combine all that is valuable in the systems of Manesca, Ollendorff, Hamilton, and the older grammarians.
The publishers will send copies of the First Lesson, which will give a general idea of the System, gratis, to those who may apply for it; or they will send by mail, free of expense, on the receipt of one dollar, a copy of the book; or of one dollar and fifty cents, a copy of the book and Key.
NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
"This system is very simple, thorough and natural, as well as methodical and systematic." [Boston Daily Atlas.
"The Robertsonian System of teaching modern languages has had great success in Europe, and the present work is a very full and thorough exposition of it." [Cumming's Evening Bulletin.
"This System resembles Manesca's in its frequent repetition, Levizac's in its analytic syntax, Ollendorff's in its dialogues, and Hamilton's in its exercises for composition." [Albany Evening Journal.
"Altogether, this is a masterly method of acquiring not only a knowledge, but actual proficiency in this popular and useful language. It may be safely commended as invaluable." [Philadelphia American Courier.
"Combining great ingenuity with remarkable thoroughness, this method opens a certain path to a complete mastery of the French language." [New York Tribune.
