The New Gridiron keeps you out of stews and saves you from fires, but effords you the most delicious broils. The fat and juices are all saved to moisten and flavor your meat—not a drop goes into the fire. The draught is downward which drives the gas and smoke up the chimney of your house, instead of the chimney of your nose. The Tribune or Nov. 9 pitches into inventors for not advertising, and in the course of its scourging hauls the Gridiron over the coals in the following enthusiastic fashion:
"We commended the other day a patent Gridiron, because it is one of the best inventions of culinary implements that we have seen in many a day, and we wish it was in every family. We are inquired of daily where they are for sale. We don't know, and if we did we should not tell."
Good Mr. Tribune! We are only just ready to advertise. Don't be in a hurry, and you will hear from us in due season. The Gridiron will be sale at No. 81 Duane-st., near Broadway, and by the Hardware trade generally. Agents wanted in the city and county. Address AMERICAN AND FOREIGN PATENT AGENCY, No. 520 Broadway, New-York.

Electro-Chemical Baths.—Dr. TRALL employs the BATHS of M. VERGNES in connection with the WATER-CURE APPLIANCES for the speedy elimination of all mineral drugs and other poisons from the system, at his establishment, No. 15 Laight-st.

THE NEW PURCHASE: OR, EARLY YEARS IN THE WEST.
BY ROBERT CARLTON, ESQ.
Second edition, revised and illustrated. In one volume. Four hundred and seventy-one pages. 12mo. cloth. Price $1 25.
The New Purchase is a truthful story of the life of the author for a period of nearly eight years, during a portion of which time he was a Professor in the University of a Western State, and enjoyed the society of many men eminent in learning and politics. Amid the varied joys and sorrows, trials and triumphs which attended the career of the author while sojourning in the West, he kindly introduces the reader to many of his cotemporaries, some of whom are painted by a friendly hand, while others are touched as if with caustic. Some of the characters delineated are supposed to personify General John McCalla of Lexington, Ky., and, now of Washington, D. C.; Prof. Harney of the Democrat, Louisville, Ky.; Governor Joseph A. Wright of Indiana, the late Governor Whitcomb; Professor Bush of New-York; the Hon. Peria C. Dunning of Indiana; Austin Seward, esq.; the Rev. Andrew Wylie, D. D.; David H. Maxwell, M. D.; the Rev. Isaac Reed; Dr. R. Breckenridge of Ky.; the Rev. W. Martin of Ind.; with many others whom it may not be advisable to mention. The incidents of the book are subs antially true. The Camp-Meeting, the Log-Rolling, the Rifle Match, the Sermon in Foster's Saw-Mill, the Barbecue, the Stump Speeches, the trouble and dissensions in the College, the Exhibition, the Trial, the Post-Office scene, Mariah Hall's discourse, the Charivari, the Pigeon-shooting, &c., are scenes drawn from nature and present faithful portraitures of life in a new country.
"The New Purchase is one of the most impulsive books I have ever read." [N. P. Willis.
"The author has exhibited every style and proved himself master of all." [Chandler.
"Another such book will not be written for a hundred years." [Mrs Kirkland.
"I have searched through all the bookstores and stalls for the New Purchase, but cannot get it for love or money." [Professor Bush.
"The New Purchase was read aloud in my family, and we laughed and cried over it alternately." [The Rev. R. Davidson, D. D., late Pres. Penn. University.
"A second edition of this graphic and interesting work is required to satisfy the oft repeated demand." [Geo. D. Prentice.

A PORTRAIT of a FASHIONABLE LADY.—D. APPLETON & Co., Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, have now ready a new edition of JUNO CLIFFORD:
A TALE: BY A LADY.
1 vol., 12mo. With Illustrations. Price $1 25.
From The Newark Daily Advertiser.
"No portrait of a lady by the most distinguished Academician, ever more successfully portrayed the outward lineaments of both beauty and excellence, than does this production of one of those nameless personages—whose sparkling eyes are wont to look down upon us annually from the walls of the Academy—faithfully exhibit intellectual power and vigor joined to a refined taste and noble sentiments. The artist's skill is rather a secondary consideration as we gaze upon the picture, but in the written work the ability of the author is the prominent idea; and as to the one before us, anonymous though it be—ushered to the world under so simple a title—the most renowned of American novelists might be proud of its authorship.
"After a careful and entire perusal, which its many attractions will secure for it from all, we do not hesitate to prophesy for "Juno Clifford" no ephemeral existence. It possesses qualities likely to insure it extensive favor and a high position among standard novels, and whoever the authoress may be, she—if this is her first work, as we are led to suppose—at once humbly attained an eminence which few have been able to reach after long and laborious exertions. The scenes are laid in Boston and New-York, and the characters (save the heroine, who is 'herself alone') are such as we may suppose within our reach at any time; yet so faithfully is the story told, so nicely adjusted are its various parts, so well wrought out its detail, so great the interest excited, so pleasing the style, so graceful the diction that we cannot but read with satisfaction, and lay the book down with regret. Its moral tone, moreover, is excellent, and in every respect it is a superior work, and of course well worth perusal."

Third Edition within a Year!
THE AMERICAN ECLECTIC DISPENSATORY. By John King, M.D. 1 vol., royal 8vo.; 1,366 pp. Price $6.
"A very great deal of labor has been bestowed upon the production. It contains an account of a larger number of the medical plants indigenous to our country than any other work we are acquainted with." [Mich. Journal of Medicine.
"We commend this work to the attention of our readers as worthy a place in their libraries mainly on account of the information it contains on the subject of our indigenous materia medica." [New-Jersey Medical Reporter.
"Learn that Truth is in all—is as omnipresent in human knowledge as the great God of Truth is in his creation. Thus would the student be trained to be a true Eclectic, and seek for the truth in every system and every theory. He would find it in Allopathic, Homeopathic or Hydropathic systems, in Biochemical, dynamical or histological theories." [Forbes' British and Foreign Medical Review.
This work should be in the hands of every apothecary and physician, and is an indispensable requisite to all who would understand the true value of the indigenous plants of America used for medicinal purposes. It is commended in the strongest terms by the American Journal of Pharmacy, the highest authority in this department of science.

"A Sketch of Rustic Yankee Life."
TWICE MARRIED:
A STORY OF CONNECTICUT LIFE.
FOURTH THOUSAND.
One Vol. 12mo. Cloth, Seventy-five Cents.
"One of the best-written tales we have of primitive Yankee life and character." [New-Bedford Mercury.
"In 'Twice Married' we have a natural, wholesome, healthy, and real New-England story, told, too, in the best of old English. Whoever has visited the quaint and quiet town of Windham will at once recognize the description of 'Walbury,' from the pleasant painting of the scenery around about, even to the 'graven image of the chubby Bacchus, sitting astride upon a wine-cask,' up in the fork of the venerable elm-tree before the tavern door. Hartford, too, as it appeared twenty years ago, is well described, from the old 'Stage-House,' in State-st., to the respectable Young Ladies' Establishment formerly kept by the Misses Pelmber. There are plenty of other places and people, too, in this story, at once recognizable. For the characters in 'Twice Married' are all them of every-day Yankee life. There are plenty of Sweenys and Tabithas, and now and then a Dashleigh and a Lucy Manners; and the story is a reflex of country society and customs in Connecticut as they were twenty years ago, and are to this day in localities not yet cut up by railroads. [Hartford Daily Times.
"We have not read so pleasing and delightful a story from an American author for a long time. It has the real New-England fragrance throughout. It is beautifully printed." [Sentinel and Witness (Middletown, Conn.)
"Its merits, which are decided, bespeak a careful, correct, and easy writer, a shrewd and intelligent observer of human nature, and a sagacious defender of Yankeedom." [Boston Atlas.
"The style of the author, is genial and attractive, and reminds us of the smooth and graceful style of Dietrich Knickerbocker, the renowned author of the "History of New-York," which has obtained such universal commendation. The characters are well-drawn, and Col. Manners and his wife John Dashleigh, Lucy and Deacon Joab Sweeny, cannot fail to have an abiding-place in the memory." [Ohio Columbian.
"'Twice Married' is truly a charming tale, as fresh and inspiring as the morning air in Connecticut meadows. It is a genuine tale of Connecticut life as faithful as the best picture which Mr. Judd could draw." [N. Y. Christian Inquirer.
"Quiet drollery pervades each leaf, and his good-natured satire loses nothing of its force from being laid on like sol-b-beate's skin." [New Bedford Standard.
"It is a genuine New England story, and is written in the clear, simple, idiomatic style in which all such stories ought to be clothed." [State of Maine.
"One of the most truthful and pleasing pictures of the genial and homely life of New-England, written in a simple, unaffected style, and with a heart gushing over with kindly and generous sympathies." [N. Y. Herald.

A PEEP AT NEW-YORK SOCIETY.
In one handsome crown 8vo. volume, cloth, $1.
The author (moving in the first circles of American society) has given in this volume, not only a graphic and life-like picture of New York fashionable life, but has produced an interesting and instructive tale. The moral of the book is excellent; the incidents and descriptions easy and natural.
"Many have pointed out and criticised the errors of our society, but too frequently with that tinge of bitter sarcasm which renders all censure unpopulative or a beneficial result. We have adopted a different plan; and, in reluctantly relating the vices which necessarily conceals the weaknesses of our fashionables, we have endeavored to display those brilliant traits of refinement and elegance—of true kindness and noble devotion—which lend so pure a light to the picture." [Preface.
