Appeal for the Children's Industrial School of the N. Y. House and School of Industry.—The Managers of the N. Y. House and School of Industry would earnestly and respectfully appeal to the public in behalf of the Children's School, which forms a part of this Institution.

The original object of this Association was to afford employment to poor and deserving needy women.

As the most expert of these, at fair prices, cannot earn over fifty cents a day and the lowest scarcely a shilling, it is clear that no woman can maintain a family by her needle alone. The Managers found, therefore, that something more than work was required; and to make this charity permanently and effectively useful, they opened two schools for the children of these women, one in which the older girls are taught to sew, (as an in many cases to assist their mothers,) and another for their young children from the ages of 3 to 10, where they are taught, fed and cared for during the day.

They have now no space to accommodate the numbers that are crowding in upon them and henceforward will be compelled to refuse these little ones the education they crave, without the public give the required assistance in the work.

The Managers desire to add to their building a school-house, on the lot they already own, and toward which some funds have been contributed. They do not feel themselves authorized, however, to commence a work for which the full sum has not been subscribed, nor approve of debt, (which they have ever carefully avoided) even in matters of charity.

The estimated cost of the building is $5,500, of which $1,200 have been subscribed.

Will the public now assist them, or are the Managers to refuse these little ones the education which is to them literally the "bread of life," and thus throw them back upon that ignorance which must tend hereafter to a dependence on charity, if not to the "wages of sin."

The following Ladies will receive all such donations for this object as may be sent to them: Mrs. George Griswold, No. 9 Washington square; Mrs. Wm. LeRoy, No. 36 East 13th-st.; Mrs. Oscar Irving, No. 46 West 10th-st.; Mrs. Walden Pell, No. 13 West 21st-st.; Mrs. Dr. Ely, 2d-av.; Mrs. R. H. McDuffy, No. 11 East 14th-st.; Mrs. N. Leavenworth, No. 222 10th-st.; Mrs. Walter Lowrie, No. 129 12th-st.; Miss K. House, No. 24 West 19th-st.; Miss E. Morris, No. 237 10th-st.; Mrs. Edward Jones, No. 296 Mercer-st.; Mrs. J. B. Murray, No. 105 8th-av.

THE WIDOW BEDOTT PAPERS.—Here is a capital Sixpence of this LAUGHTER-PROVOKING BOOK.

From The New-York Daily News.

"This is a book of genuine humor. Mr. Samuel Slick, say, may as well take up his hat, make his bow and retire. Parts of the book exceed any papers from the pen of the illustrious Mr. Crackle; but it is Yankee humor and fun. The old lady is presented to us as the wife of Deacon Hezekiah Bedott. She aids him to the grave—is in her cap for almost all the marriageable men in Wigglerton—makes an excursion to Scrabblestill to visit her sister—learns that Elder Abednego Shadrack Sniffles has become a widower; though a violent Presbyterian before, she all at once becomes fascinated with the Baptist doctrines of the Elder, and becomes a devout attendant on his powerful preaching. The Elder is 'took sick'—Widow Bedott sends him a consolation in the shape of some poetic lines, and as these afford a fair specimen of the widow's poetic talent, we select a couple of stanzas of average merit from the lines to Elder Sniffles:

'O! Reverend Sir, I do declare,
It drives me most to frenzy,
To think o' you livin' there,
Down sick with influenzy.

'A body'd thought it was enough
To mourn yer wife's departure,
Without such trouble as this here
To come a follerin arter.'

"The poetry and some medicine sent, to be dipped in hot vinegar every ten minutes all night, to make the Elder rest comfortable worked a cure, and enabled the widow to take advantage of the absence of the disease to carry off the patient—which she did by marrying him—he being all the time under the delusion that she was a rich widow, when she was not worth her shoe-strings.

"Shortly before the Elder 'popped the question' the widow retired to a grove near the house, and there sang a plaintive ditty, from which we extract the following:

'I heerd him preach—I heerd him pray—
I heerd him sweetly sing.
Dear Sue! how I did feel that day!
It was a dreadful thing!

'Full forty dollars would I give
If we'd continued apart—
For though he's made my sperrit live,
He's surely hurt my heart!'

"The widow's song was overheard by the Elder; and what follows the reader will find in the book!"

The most static and conservative editors CANNOT KEEP THEIR FACES STRAIGHT.

Says The New-York Observer: "A volume more full of genial humor and irresistible Yankee character has not yet been published—not even excepting the experiences of the renowned 'Sam Slick.'

Says The Boston Olive Branch: "The book is one that will keep all eyes wide awake. The author was a gifted creature, the wife of a clergyman and is now, alas dead. Here were the keenest powers of satire—her drollery is inimitable. The preface is delightfully written by Alice B. Neal."

Says The New-York Evangelist: "A book of genuine humor and well directed successful sarcasm. The follies of female character, the silliness and absurdity of envy, detraction and mischief making, and other prominent sins, are hit with great point and effectiveness."

Says The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser: "The Widow Bedott is made the medium of the most humorous sketches of Yankee character, which it is impossible to read without laughing immoderately."

The Publisher takes the liberty of adding the following. On page 31 of the book the Widow writes as follows:

"I'll never change my single lot—
I think 'twould be a sin;
The inconsolable widow of Deacon Bedott
Don't intend to get married agin."

But after her capture of Elder Sniffles she indites the following lines to him:

"Priscilla the fair, and Shadrach the wise,
Have united their fortunes in the tenderest of ties;
And being mutually joined in the matrimonial connection,
Have bid adieu to their previous affliction."

The rest of the "Pome" the reader will find on page 190 of the book, which can be found at all bookstores. Price, $1 25.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD. BY MRS. ANNE S. STEPHENS.

There are some human souls serenely bright,
Born like lost cherubim so close to heaven,
That all their lives are radiant with its light,
And unto such are holy missives given.

One vol., 12mo. $1 25.

From The Churchman.

"This volume is one which, as well as being full of exciting interest as a work of fiction, records some most important practical lessons to our public men, and furnishes valuable practical suggestions to the benevolent and charitable."

From The Religious Herald.

"If there is a living female writer who is superior to Mrs. Stephens in power to stir the soul to its lowest fountains, and sweep the tenderest chords of passion, that writer is unknown to us. * * * None can read this volume without seeing how the trials of early life may be sanctified, and give strength and power to mankind."

From The Christian Intelligencer.

"This work, with its sweet, pure pictures of rural life, is decidedly good."

From The Christian Herald.

"Mrs. Stephens is one of the best writers of her school."

From The Christian Freeman.

"Graphic and touching. Characters distinctly drawn and vividly portrayed."

From The Christian Secretary.

"Worthy the genius of a Cooper or a Scott."

REYNOLDS'S GREAT NOVEL on the WAR.—Second Edition now ready of OMAR PASHA; OR, THE VISIER'S DAUGHTER. By G. W. M. REYNOLDS. Author of "Life in London," "Ellen Munroe," etc. Price, 50 cents.

From The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"It would have been well for his reputation had the author always written books so unexceptionable, and at the same time so interesting as the one under notice. This is a romance of the war between Russia and Turkey, and the hero is the veritable Omar whose generalship beat the Russians back from the Danube. In the course of the story, graphic descriptions are given of most of the brilliant actions of the war, down to the battle of Inkermann. Mr. Reynolds was formerly, we are told, an officer in the British army, and his knowledge of military science has enabled him to depict military scenes with rare spirit and fidelity."

Published by STRINGER & TOWNSEND, No. 222 Broadway, N. Y.
