THE HOLY GOSPELS;
ILLUSTRATED IN FORTY ORIGINAL DESIGNS.
By FREDERICK OVERBECK.
One Volume folio, Antique Morocco. Price $20.

"These designs, so long celebrated for their exquisite beauty, and having for some years even in one instance of several of the first engravers, are now first given to the public in their complete form. We look upon the present volume as a most rare and precious Commentary on the Gospels. Where is the scholar or the orator who can explain our Lord's Parables with the power shown in the pourtrait here given of the "Ten Virgins" and the "Sleeping Husbandmen?" What so other can teach the humility or the majesty of duty more eloquently than the illustrations here presented of Christ washing as in by serving a child before his Disciples, and unknown world known by calling Matthew from his go d to follow the Master into the end? What evangelist, however learned or eloquent can equal the touch of this pentrat in bringing to the heart the meaning of the Resurrection of Lazarus, and the path s of Gethsemane and Calvary?" [Extract from Critics.

A New Book by Alice Grey.

LILY HUSON; Or, THE AUTO-BIOGRAPHY OF AN ORPHAN GIRL. By Alice Grey. Now ready.

We present the first of the series of excellent stories, to be the veritable history of the early life of Alice Grey, some charming Magazine Tales have so often added the thoughtful accents of the domestic fireside, and Humorists provoked the merry laugh or brought the tear of sympathy to the eye.

Be this as it may, in this tale we have the so heretic anti-Bigotry of a young lady, a resident of this state—so slightly concealed beneath the guise of fiction as to conceal the actual personages from the curiosity of the general public—but so sufficiently concealed as to hide them from those who are not acquainted with the authors or are ignorant of the scenes and which she has been an actress. Lily Huson is a simple interesting story of actual life, showing how touch real romance exists and the common-place of every day affairs. It is a beautifully written book, and will doubtless be greatly sought after by those who admire books of tenderness and feeling, which appeal directly to the gentler emotions of the heart.

This book will be a most suitable present to the ladies—for whom it is more particularly written—at the same time it may be read with profit by persons of all ages and both sexes.

Bound in cloth; price $1. H. LONG & BROTHER, No. 121 Nassau-st. and all booksellers.

CASTE;
A STORY of REPUBLICAN EQUALITY.

This brilliant and powerful book is meeting with a hearty reception in all parts of the country. Its doctrinal portions are so courteously written as to gain the respect and attention of all. But it is as a

FASCINATING STORY

that it will chiefly be read. All classes and ages will be charmed with it.

The Boston Post of the 23d, a paper not generally disposed to favor Anti Slavery literature, says:

"Obliged as we are to wade through the quantities of mere trash that under the names of 'Tale, Romance Story and Novel' are continually issuing from the American Press, we cordially welcome a really interesting, earnest, clever and original 'American book. Such a one is Caste."

In one volume, 12mo., 340 pp. Price $1 25.

* * * * * *
But she was 'crossed in love,' and thence her life
To heading rule tended."

The Publishers will only add that this work is written in the same clear, forcible and attractive style which distinguishes the other productions of its author—is free from any improprieties of language, and eminently calculated to enlist the reader's sympathies in behalf of its unfortunate subject.

THE NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—
JUST PUBLISHED:
THE PRIVATE LIFE OF AN EASTERN KING.
By Wm. Kinglake, a member of the household of his late Majesty Nussdin Beth, King of Oude, and author of "Forest Life in Ceylon," "Tropical Sketches," &c. 12mo., cloth; 75 c.

"The whole story reads like a lost chapter from the Arabian Nights." [London Athenæum.

"Gives a better insight into purely Eastern manners than any work we know of." [News of the World, London.

"The late Nussir-e-Deen, King of Oude, is the hero of this amusing volume, which lets the reader very much behind the scenes as regards court life in Asia. Since the appearance of the Arabian Nights, there has been no such exposition of the swaying and doings of Eastern Royalty." [N. Y. Daily Times.

"Looking on the capital as good for the extraordinary passages of wild animal, and one of the chief amusements of the court appears to have been to witness them fight. Some very exciting contests are narrated, and the book contains much of interest in the sportsman. It also conveys a vivid picture of Eastern manners, as gets in all their fantasticity, and some of the daily scenes recorded are scarcely less wonderful than those of Haji Baba." [Boston Traveller.

"The career of the cabin-boy baron, who exercised such great influence over the Crown, and so much to his own advantage, having amassed the sum of $240,000 before he returned, is a very curious one and well told. On the whole, this is one of the most amusing books of the season." [Boston Telegraph.

"Indeed, the book is a capital one—perfectly free in its scenes and incidents, and not so long as to weary the reader, for he can go through it in a few hours." [Eve. Bulletin, Phil.

"He lifts the curtain and unfolds the minutiæ of the daily life of an absolute sovereign. We learn curious Eastern manners and Hindoo peculiarities than from stately histories or elaborate geographies. We can commend it as an amusing volume." [Richmond Herald, Richmond, Va.
