Dyer's Healing Embrocation.—A well-established remedy like this needs certainly no a word of praise; yet from personal experience, we can speak of the benefit derived from it. It relieves both of external and internal application, and as a remedy for cuts, wounds or bruises, it is invaluable. No one should be without a package of this Embrocation in his house, for, in case of accidents, it affords a speedy and sure relief. For the same reason, the traveler should, as a measure of precaution, carry one or two bottles, which are of convenient size, in his pocket. We have never known of an instance where those using the remedy have been not only satisfied with it, but have recommended it to their friends in the strongest terms. It performs all that is promised for it.

HENRY WARD BEECHER says: "Bigelow's Life of Fremont is admirable, as good as it is cheap. Every family should have a copy."
Dr. O. BAILEY, Editor of The National Era, says: "It will prove an efficient weapon in the present Campaign. Let our friends therefore arm themselves with Bigelow's Life of Fremont."
Says The N. Y. Independent: "This work comprises the fullest and most complete account yet published of the life of this extraordinary man, and by its plain and irrefragable facts forestalls and silences the whole immense brood of malignant slanders with which the Pro-Slavery party are endeavoring to befoul the public mind."
Says The N. Y. Daily Herald: "This is by far the most comprehensive and satisfactory Life of Col. Fremont that has as yet been published."
