Fluid Extract of Dandelion.—The preparations of Dandelion generally found in the market are inert and worthless, to an extent that creates the opinion that the plant has not the medical virtues which writers claim for it. The error arises from want of skill in its preparation. It is a valuable alterative, tonic, diuretic, and aperient; it has a specific action on the liver, exciting, when languid, to secretion. The diseases to which it is especially applicable are, derangement of the digestive organs, dyspepsia, diseases of the liver and spleen, irritable gastric dyspepsia, diseases of the liver and spleen, irritable condition of the stomach and bowels. In many cases of dyspepsia and liver complaint, our preparations have produced sore mouth and gums, affording permanent relief; this fact alone is conclusive in its favor as a remedial agent, when properly prepared. Prepared by TILDEN & Co., No. 96 John-st., New-York, and sold by all Apothecaries.

A WORK of ENEQUALED POWER and PATHOS.—The new Tale, entitled
ORION, THE GOLD-BEATER, which SYLVANUS COBB, jr. has just completed for the NEW-YORK LEDGER, the first installment of which will be issued in the LEDGER of TO-MORROW (Friday) MORNING, is the best daguerreotype of City Life which has ever been given to the public. Mr. COBB, in company with some of our city missionaries, has visited all the most noted haunts of vice and wretched abodes of misery in New-York, and in the Tale of ORION, THE GOLD-BEATER, he has given the result of his observations in a manner so powerful and graphic that the reader seems actually to be gazing upon the scenes described, while the work is so refined, and is supported by such an elevated tone of morality as to render it satisfactory to the most sensitive taste, and divest the terrible facts set forth of all horror and repulsiveness.
The LEDGER is sold everywhere.
Price only FOUR CENTS.

XII. The Trial of the Commissioner.
The volume gives the secret history of the case, together with personal sketches of the principal characters, including Judge Loring, Wendell Phillips, Richard H. Dana, jr., Theodore Parker, Gov. Gardner, Gen. Edmands, Mayor Smith, Hallett, Freeman, the Suttle family, &c. In an Appendix will be found official documents, letters, and other matter illustrative of the subject, together with a detailed account of the first slave case under the Constitution of 1780, in which the Supreme Court decided that Slavery no longer existed in Massachusetts.
Byles," the well-known Boston Correspondent of The New-York Tribune, writes to that journal respecting the work as follows:
"It makes a small volume, beautifully printed and excellently get up in every respect. It is a model of succinct and lucid narration, with no attempt to lighten the effect of the facts by rhetoric; and yet it is so managed as to stir the blood as no mere art could. * * I recommend this book to the attention of every one who wishes to know how a slaveholder can command the entire national, State and municipal power to catch and carry back his slave. It is a most instructive lesson, and cannot be studied too carefully."

STORY ON CONTRACTS.
Fourth Edition, revised and greatly enlarged.
In 2 vols., 8vo. Price $11.
Every page has been studiously examined and reconsidered in the light of the modern authorities, and in many places the text has been re-written; very large additions have been made throughout, and new chapters have been written on the following subjects: Joint and Several Contracts, Change of Parties by Assignment, Change of Parties by Novation or Substitution, and the Statute of Frauds. The Reports have been carefully consulted, and a large body of important cases has been added, while nearly every citation in the book has been specially re-examined and verified, so as to secure exactness in the references to cases, of which ever ten thousand are cited. The work is now the largest in the English language on the subject of contracts.
