MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS'S NEW NOVEL,
ENTITLED
THE HEIRESS OF GREENHURST:
AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
BY MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS,
Author of "Fashion and Famine" and "The Old Homestead."
From The N. Y. Express of May 29.
"We have only space to say further, that the intense interest of the story never falters from the commencement; that the incidents, though strange and exciting, are in no manner improbable; that the moral of the book is lofty and pure; that its characters are admirably contrasted and grouped; that its truthful heart-disclosures are full of deep pathos, and command the finest sympathies of our nature; that the spirited and graphic pictures of many scenes—the stag-hunt, for instance—are superior to anything we remember; and that, as a whole, the book will sustain and even elevate the author's already high reputation. The mechanical part deserves special commendation."
12mo., 430 pages. Price $1 25.

THE PRESIDENTIAL LIFE will be complete in one volume, uniform with the above.
"The great national work, which forms such an appropriate coronal to the beautiful fame of its illustrious author is here brought down to the Inauguration of Washington as first President of the United States, affording a breathing time before the completion of the Biography, which has been read with such general interest, no less on account of the writer than of the subject. * * * * The manner in which Mr. Irving has thus far acquitted himself of his congenial task, shows the delicate refinement of taste, the seductive felicity of narrative, and the curious graces of expression, which have given him such a noble preeminence among modern writers." In consequence of this disappointment the opening chapters are republished in full in The Daily Times and Sun of to-day, which, while it enables the proprietors of The Mercury to occupy the space which would be taken up by a republication of the chapters in its columns with a greater variety of short original stories, will also enable those who may secure a copy of The Sun or Times to read from the beginning this SPLENDID LOCAL ROMANCE, the foundation of which is a
CONFESSION
actually made by a counterfeiter to his lawyer, and which will cause the cheek of unsuspected guilt to blanch with fear of discovery and exposure.
The following is a brief synopsis of a portion of the original contents of To-morrow's MERCURY:

"The story of a woman's life, unfolded in this book, is calculated to make the old feel young and the young old. * * By all this book will be read with interest. * * Mrs. Gaskell has produced one of the best biographies of a woman which we can recall to mind." [Athenæum.
"It is rarely that we find a portrait of literary character with such a remarkable setting, and as rare to find an author whose works are so popular, so vivid, and distinctive, and whose personal history was so utterly unknown." [London Times.

DYNEVOR TERRACE,
OR, THE CLUE OF LIFE;
By the Author of the "Heir of Redclyffe."
2 Vols. 12mo. Cloth, $1 50.
Extract from a review of the "Heir of Redclyffe," and "Heartease," in The North American Review for April.
"The first of her writings which made a sensation here was the 'Heir,' and what a sensation it was! Referring to the remains of the tear-wasted covers of the copy aforesaid, we find it belonged to the 'eighth thousand.' How many thousands have been issued since by the publishers to supply the demand for new, and the places of drowned, dissolved, or swept away old copies, we do not attempt to conjecture. Not individuals merely, but households—consisting in great part of tender-hearted young damsels—were plunged into mourning. With a tolerable acquaintance with fictitious heroes, (not to speak of real ones), from Sir Charles Grandison down to the nursery idol Carlton, we have little hesitation in pronouncing Sir Guy Morville, of Redcliffe, Baronet, the most admirable one we have ever met with, in story or out. The glorious, joyous boy, the brilliant, ardent child of genius and of fortune, crowned with the beauty of his early holiness, and overshadowed with the darkness of his hereditary gloom, and the soft and touching sadness of his early death—what a caution is there! What a vision!"

III.
THINGS NOT GENERALLY KNOWN;
A POPULAR HAND-BOOK OF FACTS NOT READILY ACCESSIBLE IN LITERATURE, HISTORY AND SCIENCE.
Edited by David A. Wells.
One vol., 12mo., 432 pp. Cloth, $1 25.
CONTENTS:
Part I. Language, Literature and Books. Part II. Customs, Manners and Laws. Part III. History, Geography and Statistics. Part IV. Physical Sciences. Part V. Natural Sciences. Part VI. Arts and Manufactures.
The general idea of the work will be gathered from its title, and from a glance at its contents. It contains many little items of information, gathered from the broad fields of literature, history and science, which are not contained in Encyclopedias and ordinary Hand-books, and which are readily found when sought. In the department of the Physical and Natural Sciences, moreover, are contained many interesting results of modern research, of too recent date to have found a place in ordinary scientific treatises. In a word, while this volume has little claim to a strictly scientific character, it is believed that it will be found at once useful, interesting, and familiarly instructive.

From The New-York Evening Post.
"Our attention has been called to a series of sketches just published by A. Williams & Co., of Boston, entitled 'Mr. Hardy Lee: his Yacht; being twenty-four sketches on stone, by Chinks,' which evince decided talent, and will be much enjoyed by the admirers of the kindred compositions of Leech and Doyle, in England. The story of a boating man is excellently well told by this series of sketches, in which the drollery and distinctness of character carry us pleasantly through a prettily suggested story. The sketches are unequal, and the faults of a beginner are apparent, but the individuality and expression of the different faces are quite surprising. In the third sketch, for instance, the reading mailer is scarcely necessary to tell us the different views of Mr. Lee's family, to whom he announces his intention of keeping a yacht. A number of sea-views are also given, which are drawn with great spirit. The twelfth sketch—the gem of the collection—admirably represents the repose and listlessness of a calm at sea."
