STEDMAN'S POEMS.

POEMS—LYRICAL AND IDYLLIC.
BY EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN.
1 vol., 12mo. 75 cents.
With the exception of "The Diamond Wedding," and a few other widely-copied pieces, these Poems are now published for the first time.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS:

"The author belongs to the school of Tennyson; but while the disciple suggests the master, he is still no imitator. His serious Poems, 'Penelope,' 'Flood-Tide,' 'The Protest of Faith'—not to mention others—have a value and attractiveness of their own. The thinker, the scholar, the man of cultivated taste and lofty aspiration, look out from every page of this volume."—[Boston Transcript.

"The whole treatment of this piece ("Penelope") proves Mr. Stedman to be a poet. * * * * He has a manly style, and a large and lively sense of the beautiful."—[Hartford Times.

"In polish and elegance, we know few American Poems that surpass them."—[Philadelphia Bulletin.

A volume as remarkable for racy peculiarity as for delicacy of sentiment and finish. In "Benemis," and "The Ballad of Lager Beer," the reader will find the most genial humor, daintily blended with that fine appreciation of humanity, which gives a peculiar charm to Hood and Praed."—[Charles G. Leland.

"The author's fancies are quaint and Ariel-like, adorning with their golden light whatever subject they touch."—[Norwich Bulletin.

"We find true expression of genius, taste, and culture in the Poems before us."—[New-York Observer.

"His humorous poetry is capital; his serious Poems are the true inspiration of a sweet singer."—[Boston Gazette.

"Many of the Poems are strikingly beautiful; all are elegantly and powerfully written."—[Buffalo Express.
