Dave Peay was found guilty of assault and battery.

John Williams, Josh McDaniel, Frank Young, Alex. Starks, George Crawford, George Baxter all plead guilty to gaming and were given a fine of $10.00 each or three months on the chain-gang.

The grand jury had not made its presentment.

Buying Cotton Some.

Every Fairfield farmer knows what an active factor in the cotton market Mr. W. H. Flenniken is and how he hustles about to get all the fleecy staple that is being offered for sale, but few have any real idea of the large purchases he makes. He broke all his past records last year, making a record doubtless not excelled by any other buyer in the whole State. The amount he paid out for cotton was over one-half million dollars, and by a very simple calculation it will be seen that this was nearly one-half of all the cotton grown in Fairfield county. With the start that he has made this season, he will probably make a new record for this year, for already he has bought more than $125,000 of the new crop. Mr. Flenniken represents Alex. Sprunt & Sons of Wilmington, who are the largest exporters in this country, as will be shown by the following paragraph from the Wilmington Chronicle:

Wilmington, Sept. 15.—It is not generally known that the firm of Alexander Sprunt & Sons of Wilmington is the largest cotton exporting firm in the world. However such is the fact. The latest cargo shipped consisted of 10,482 bales or 5,235,330 pounds, valued at $592,800. It goes to Liverpool. Last December the British steamer Anglo-Saxon cleared with a cargo of 17,228 bales. This is the record. Prior to this the record was 17,038 bales, which was shipped to Liverpool in January 1904. The exports of cotton from this port for last year were 345,248 bales, valued at $17,164,062.

Mr. Flenniken's cotton buying record is a credit to the county of Fairfield, whose farmers will always find him paying the very highest market prices.

LOST—Saturday morning a large mourning veil. Finder will be rewarded on returning the same to the News and Herald office.

The Island of Sakhalin.

The Island of Sakhalin, which was a bone of contention between the peace delegates, is a strip of land 25 to 150 miles wide and 900 miles long. The climate is unfavorable for agriculture, only potatoes, cabbages and turnips coming to maturity. Its numerous mountains are believed to be rich in minerals. Fishing may be said to be the chief business of the inhabitants. Herring, salmon and trout abound in the western and southern waters and are caught the year round. 6,000 Japanese were engaged in fishing before the war. The island has about 40,000 inhabitants, 23,000 of whom are convicts, 12,000 being administration and keepers of the prisoners, leaving a little more than 4,000 natives. Alexander, the capital, has 15,000 people. The island has been a Russian convict station since 1867. The first disputes on the subject of Sakhalin arose between Russia and Japan in 1856. A convention in that year granted Russia the northern part of the island. It had been inhabited by Chinese and Japanese up to that time. The latter claimed the island by the right of discovery. By the treaty of 1875 at St. Petersburg Russia got the whole, exchanging a few insignificant islands in the Kwile Archipelago. The treaty of peace signed at Portsmouth divides Sakhalin at the 50th parallel, just the division made in 1856.—Carolina Spartan.

South on Her Feet.

Excepting that of the coast region the society of South Carolina is scarcely a century and a half old. Only within the last third of this period have the family connections been large. The great war interrupted the development of the family spirit. In the poverty that followed men had no time to think of the pleasures of kinship intercourse. But South Carolina is on her feet again, rejoicing in fast increasing riches and in these manifestations of family pride there is the abundant promise that the virility of the Carolinian race shall be preserved. Due to the bitter waters through which it has been the fate of our people to pass, there are few names in South Carolina with which honorable deeds have not been coupled. What better guaranty for the future than that the ties of kinship draw the representatives of these together in happy concourse when the elders hand down to the younger generations the inspiring traditions of their blood? —News and Courier.
