New Publications.

THE PANIC SALE OF BOOKS,
Being the entire remainders
of
DERBY & JACKSON'S PUBLICATIONS, STILL CONTINUES AT
No. 498 BROADWAY.
Says The New-York Daily Times:
"BOOKS AT A DISCOUNT.—Literature seems to have come to grief as well as baser trades. The prevailing panic has struck the stock of bookmen, and 'sheep,' 'half-calf,' and 'Turkey wholes,' huddle together on their shelves like the occupants of a lightning-rod farm-yard. The stock of the late firm of Derby & Jackson, in particular, is now laid offered at a sad sacrifice. A discount of fifty per cent, with a still larger reduction to larger buyers, should tempt the buyers of books to a temporary forsakement of their sphaltic corners. It will be long, indeed, before the public has a chance to enrich themselves with such editions of the French, English and Latin classics, as are now offered, at like prices; and a century or two will pass before books like Stoddard's Loves of the Poets, Goodrich's Court of Napoleon, and Women of Beauty will be again sold at the bare cost of the paper whereon they are printed."
The whole stock has been purchased by
H. W. DERBY, No. 498 Broadway.

THE GREATEST OF INDIAN TALES.
BY
GUSTAVE AIMARD.
MAYNE REID AND FENIMORE COOPER ECLIPSED.
THE TIGER-SLAYER:
A ROMANCE
OF THE
FOREST AND THE PRAIRIE.
1 vol., 8vo. Price 50 cents.
READ WHAT BENTLEY'S MISCELLANY SAYS OF GUSTAVE AIMARD
From Bentley's Miscellany.
GUSTAVE AIMARD.
What may be termed savage literature, always possesses a great fascination for the reader, and the few writers who have devoted themselves to that field have always secured ready perusal. Who is there among us who has not hung with breathless interest over the "Last of the Mohicans?" or followed the "Pathfinder" through the series of works that depict his adventurous career? Next came Buxton, too soon taken from us, alas! but the few memorials he left showed how great a loss our literature suffered in him. Lastly, we have had Mayne Reid, who has his readers by tens of thousands, and whose novels are full of incident and vivacity. Others have trod the field and have failed; in charity to them we will omit their names.
The French had a very celebrated representative, known as Gabriel Ferry, but even his deservedly great reputation has paled before the rising luster of Gustave Aimard, who is at once the French Mayne Reid and Fenimore Cooper.
Aimard's Indian tales will be found superior to those of both the above named authors, and for very sim le reasons. Although Cooper possessed a great talent for inventing a story, the misfortune is, that the scene is laid within a very confined space; he deals with only two Eastern tribes, those which the Yankee element came most into collision with; and these tribes inexorably driven back before the white men, soon lost those salient points which distinguish the savage of the Western prairies.
Mayne Reid, on the other hand, acted wisely in laying the scene of his stories among the untamable tribes of the Western prairies—the Pawnees, the Apaches, and the Comanches—that haughty race which calls itself "Queen of the Prairies," and defies the white man. These tribes still lord it in the desert; they are constantly at war with the pale faces.
Unfortunately, however, when you have read one of Capt. Reid's stories, you have read them all, for a marvelous likeness pervades them.
The case is very different, however, with the subject of our paper. Gustave Aimard has written some dozen Indian tales, all interesting and all unlike. The great charm of his stories is, indubitably, the vitality he manages to throw into them; and he writes with such spirit that, while reading you cannot but imagine that he is describing to you scenes of which he was an eye-witness. And this was very probably the case, for Aimard's life has been one which we defy the most practiced romancer to outstrip. He has lived an age (for such an existence cannot be measured by years) among the savages. As adopted son of one of the most powerful Indian nations, he has fought, hunted, trapped by their side and is thoroughly acquainted with their every ruse. But this is not all; and fortunately for his readers, he has gone through every phase of desert life. He has been in turn squatter, hunter, trapper, and miner, and has seen the mode of life of all the adventurers who traverse the Indian deserts in every direction. Twice he was led to the stake of torture by the Apaches, and only saved by a miracle; he wanders about alone for upward of a month on the great Del Norte desert; he was a slave in one of the sacred cities of the Incas, and is probably the only European who returned alive from those gloomy caverns, where the sacred fire of Montezuma is still kept burning, over-fans tended by Vestals, as in ancient Rome; he was a prisoner for a lengthened period with the cruel and treacherous Guaymanas—in a word, there is not a portion of uncivilized America, North and South, which he has not traversed, with his good rifle in his hand, in defiance of the wild beasts and the still wilder and more dangerous inhabitants.

For EXTENT, VARIETY, and BEAUTY OF SELECTION, we display an assortment SUPERIOR TO ANY OF THE KIND EVER BEFORE PRESENTED IN THIS CITY, which offers to dealers an UNLIMITED range of STYLES and PRICES from which to choose.
WE PARTICULARLY INVITE THOSE WHO HAVE NEVER DEALT WITH US TO EXAMINE OUR GOODS AND PRICES, assuring them that all the advantages which we have gained by LONG EXPERIENCE, LARGE PURCHASES and CASH PAYMENTS, will be liberally divided with CASH AND FIRST-CLASS TIME BUYERS.
We annex a list of a few of the articles embraced in our variety, all of which will be sold by the package or in lots to suit purchasers.
Catalogues giving a full description of our stock will be furnished or sent by mail on application.
All orders intrusted to us will be accurately and expeditiously supplied.

Boots, Shoes, &c.

McCLALLAN'S
PATENT WOODEN-SOLE
BOOTS, SHOES AND BROGANS,
The cheapest and most durable Waterproof Boots, Shoes, and Brogans ever manufactured for Farmers, Miners, Gardeners, or persons working in damp situations.
Farmers after wearing them will find them almost indispensible for plowing, ditching, and other work.
They are perfectly impervious to water and are made with all the neatness of leather-sole goods, as wood is a good non conductor these boots and shoes are superior to those made entirely of leather for keeping the feet warm. They are cheaper for the consumer as one pair will wear as long as two of the ordinary leather-soled. The sole is so formed as to walk with perfect ease.
Foundery men, miners, bleachers and dyers will find them the best and cheapest boots and shoes ever manufactured for their business.
Fine Boots and Shoes are made in style unequaled, and in wet weather no person should be without them.
Discount made to dealers. M. McLALLAN & SON,
Manufacturers, Chicopee, Mass.
