Battle-Field Scenes.

The Washington Republican has the following:

A party with a flag of truce went from Centreville on Monday morning for the battle-ground, but found no Rebels, and the field deserted by our enemies who had left our dead and wounded untouched. The wounded were placed in ambulances and taken off the field, and the dead were buried.

In Saturday's fight a sad and most unaccountable blunder occurred. The 3d Michigan went into the battle with 280 men and came out with only 146, and more than three-fourths of this number met their fate by the fire of the 20th Indiana Regiment, which lapped over their rear and poured a galling fire into them while on the advance. The first knowledge which the Michigan boys had of the presence of the other regiment was the bullets in the back of their heads, arms, &c., nearly half the regiment having lapped across them.

In the fight on Monday night, the 1st and 40th New-York, having but few officers, concentrated, and fought "on their own hook," and in their own way. The Union troops drove the Rebels at least a mile and a half, and after a very severe contest, which was fought during the storm, our troops rested upon the field, having gained a complete victory.

The War in the South-West.

NASHVILLE, Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1862.

Reports, coming from trustworthy sources, state that Forrest and his entire force were taken last night at Alexandria, near Lebanon. Expeditions started from McMinnville, Murfreesboro, and Lebanon, for the purpose of simultaneously attacking him.

The city is full of rumors about military movements. A great many Union officers in town have been ordered to their several regiments.

The first mail from the North for twenty days arrived to-night.

LOUISVILLE, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

In view of the preparations made and making to resist the enemy, the excitement here has considerably abated. The cotton here is rapidly being transported across the Ohio River, purchasers refusing to pay here, but offering 45c. on the Indiana shore—an advance of 5c. on yesterday's price.

Authenticated rumors say that the Rebels are burning all the cotton they come across in their marches through Tennessee and Kentucky.

Col. Shackleford of the 8th Kentucky Cavalry overtook A. R. Johnson at Morgansfield, Union County, yesterday, killing and capturing a number of Johnson's band, and is still pursuing the remainder. The Southern line is again interrupted below Russellville.

CINCINNATI, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

Regiments from the camps and companies from the interior towns, have been arriving all the afternoon. The military authorities are very active.

The Rebels occupied Lexington at 6 p. m. Tuesday, 6,000 strong. Railroad and telegraphic communication has been re-established to Paris.

From Fortress Monroe.

FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1862.

The flag of truce has just arrived from Aikens's Landing (steamboat Mary Benton.) They took up Capt. McCormick, the noted privateer, who captured the propeller Fanny at Hatteras Inlet nearly a year ago. He has been privateering most of the time during the war, and I am informed he has been twice captured and paroled. He was last captured at Newbern, N. C.

The Mary Benton brought down the family of ex-President John Tyler, consisting of Mrs. Tyler, and six small children. They are on their way North from City Point.

A lady from Richmond also came down, and says there is much sickness at Richmond; that the city is quite deserted; she heard nothing said of the late battles; the Rebels are very confident of doing great execution with their iron-clad gunboats, when completed. No papers were brought down.

War Matters in Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

An erroneous report has been in circulation here that Gov. Curtin had telegraphed to the Secretary of War that he insisted on Pennsylvania troops being placed under Maj.-Gen. McClellan.

The intelligence from Washington that the army is falling back to the fortifications has given rise to the expression of opinions regarding the propriety of sending troops away when they may be required for the defense of the State. A large number have already gone, and more are preparing to go.

Recruiting in the State.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1862.

From all accounts recruiting has been very active throughout the State for the past two days. The State will probably make the draft about the 15th. Gen. Busteed was in town on Wednesday, on the invitation of the Governor. It is supposed his business was connected with the draft.

More Regiments for the Seat of War.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1862.

The 29th Maine Regiment, Col. Ames, and the 30th Massachusetts, Col. Bowman, embarked this afternoon by steamer Merrimac for the seat of war.

Movements of Gen. Corcoran.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

Gen. Corcoran, accompanied by Alderman Dayton, is at Congress Hall.

The General comes here to forward the raising of a regiment.

The 140th Regiment.

SYRACUSE, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

The 4th Onondaga Regiment (the 140th) was organized today. C. I. Barnum, late Major of the 24th, commands. There will be no draft in old Onondaga. The two new regiments, together with 400 men in the old regiments, have less than 200 of the full quota under both calls to be raised.

Boston Benevolence.

WARRENTON, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

Eight freight car loads of hospital stores and supplies which were contributed by the citizens of Boston on Sunday afternoon, arrived here this morning, accompanied by Mayor Wightman, several members of the City Council and a force of 18 policemen. These immense contributions were forwarded in charge of the Adams Express Company, and were delivered at the capital free of charge for freight. The railroads forming the route (via Worcester and Springfield to New-York, the Camden and Amboy Railroad, the Philadelphia and Baltimore Railroad, and the Baltimore and Washington Railroad), transported the 70 tuns of freight without charge as their contribution toward the noble object of comforting our wounded soldiers. The Shore route from Boston to New-York also brought two cars in the same liberal manner. The Boston Police force have made themselves very useful in carrying the wounded from the boats and cars to the ambulances. Their strong arms have been a grateful assistance to the sufferers. The attentions and supplies are not confined to the volunteers of Massachusetts, all share the Boston benevolence.

THE GUERRILLAS IN WESTERN VIRGINIA.

Apprehension of a Raid at Philippi—Our Force Prepared to Meet It.

PHILIPPI, Aug. 31, 1862.

EDITORS INTELLIGENCER: A report reached this place yesterday that a large force of Rebel cavalry had made a raid on Buckhannon, taking possession of the place, and killing nearly all of the little force of soldiers there. Capt. Reese of the 6th Virginia Regiment, now at this place, received orders from Col. Wilkinson to be on the alert for fear of a dash on this place from that direction. The Captain and his boys were ready for them last night, and are looking for them to-day. There was considerable excitement among the people of Philippi during the whole of last night. Nothing has been heard from Buckhannon to-day. Yours truly, D. S.

The Indian Troubles.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

The St. Paul Pioneer of the 30th says Col. Sibley's advance reached Fort Ridgley on Wednesday morning last. On Monday the Indians, in a large body, moved up the river toward Red Wood. They had a large team of wagons, horses and cattle, and supposed also to have about 200 captives, women and children.

The Pacific Railroad—Second Day.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

The Convention was called to order at 10:30. The minutes of yesterday's proceedings were read and approved. A joint resolution of the Legislature of Colorado Territory, on the subject of the Pacific Railroad, was received and laid on the table for future consideration.

A Committee of thirteen to arrange the business reported a preamble and resolutions, which set forth the importance of the road in developing the mineral resources of the West, and recommended the most strenuous exertions, and to still further unite for the perpetuation of our Union by a system of communication between the two oceans, which shall bind the citizens of the different sections in still closer bonds; that the pressure of the war should not discourage the vigorous prosecution of the work, but give it a fresh impetus.

They also recommend the opening of books for the Pacific Road at one of the principal cities in each Northern State and San Francisco.

The report was accepted. The Committee not having finished their labors, leave was granted them to sit again. Gen. Hill of Dacotah, being present, was invited to take a seat in the Convention. Gov. Evans of Colorado addressed the Convention on the advantages to be gained by running the route through that Territory.

Several other gentlemen spoke of the vast importance of the road and the advantages to be gained by its speedy completion. During the afternoon session, the preamble and resolutions of the Committee were adopted, with the exception of one naming places where books were to be opened. This was discussed at length. Without action, the Convention adjourned till to-morrow.

The World's Horse Fair—Boiler Explosion, &c.

CHICAGO, Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1862.

The World's Horse Fair opened yesterday with many promising indications that it would be a success. The number of entries of blooded and superior horses from New-York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Kentucky, and all the Western States were very large. The managers of the exhibition for months past have been unceasing in their efforts to provide against failure. The number of visitors yesterday and to-day were not so large as anticipated, but every train arriving brings accessions. The fair lasts two weeks.

The tug Union exploded her boiler at the mouth of the River to-day. Thos. Boyd, Harbor-Master, Capt. Daly, and Geo. W. Grearson, were drowned. Capt. Hall of the schooner Advance was seriously wounded. Chas. Harding had his knee fractured.

The North American Telegraph Association met in this city to-day. All were represented except the Atlantic and Ohio. Delegates from this are expected to-night or to-morrow.

Seventeenth Ward Union Association.

A meeting of the Union Association of the above-named Ward was held last evening at the Steuben House, No. 208 Bowery. In the absence of the President, Joseph S. Monell, M. D., Jacob D. Young, Esq., called the meeting to order. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. On motion, it was resolved that the Association proceed to elect Delegates to the Union State Convention to be held at Syracuse, Sept. 24, 1862. For the Sixth District, William T. Ashman, Delegate; Edward Thomas, Alternate. For Tenth District, Frederick Olmsted, William H. Falconer, William A. Smalley, Delegates; Thomas A. Oakley, Henry A. Weed, George Kirk, Alternates. Twelfth District, Frederick C. Wagner, Delegate; Charles L. Crofut, Alternate.

WALLACK'S THEATER.—The visit of Gen. Corcoran to this place of amusement is announced to take place to-night.

AMONG THE PINES.—Having received so much gratification from the perusal of "Among the Pines," we cannot refrain from doing all in our humble way toward calling public attention to it. "This work," says the author, in the concluding chapter, "is not a work of fiction. It is a record of facts. The characters I have introduced are real. They are not drawn with the pencil of fancy, nor I trust colored with the tints of prejudice. The scenes I have described are true. I have taken some liberties with the names of persons and places, and in a few instances altered dates, but the events themselves occurred under my own observation." He says again: "Let some one who has not seen the slave and the poor white man of the South, as he actually is, should from my picture overdraw, I will say that the half has not been told. If the whole were related; if the Southern system in all its native ugliness were fully exposed, the truth would read like fiction, and the baldest relation of fact like the wildest dream of romance."

Let the reader bear in mind that this book is not the work of a Northern Abolitionist. It is written by one who was known for his conservative sentiments, and one who, in the last Presidential canvass, voted for Douglas.

We cannot, in the space allowed us, attempt to introduce any of the scenes in that drama of life. Our object is simply to call attention to the book, to beg for it a careful reading. We feel sure no one with the feelings of a Christian man or woman can fail of becoming interested in the characters of Sap, Jim, and the blighted octoroon woman, Such men as Col. J., notwithstanding all their good points, will hardly be able to make men of thought and reflection love the peculiar institution, while the contemplation of the characters of Capt. R. Barnes, Andy Jones and others, may cause a blush of shame to mount the cheeks of Northern apologists for Slavery.

Ignorance is often said to be the parent of vice; it is also the parent of foolish prejudices. So long as a man consents to remain in ignorance on any particular subject, and is determined not to allow a new idea to enter his mind—so long as he bars on the door by every means in his power, there is very little hope that he will improve; but if he rises above customary prejudices and opens his eyes to the light, though the glare may be very trying at first, he will soon be able to bear it, and will eventually laugh at the perverseness with which he once clung to it. Now, we cannot but feel that any man or woman who will give this beautifully and truthfully written book a careful perusal, will rise from its pages both wiser and better.

For ourselves, we thank the author for what he has done; we thank him for the sunny spots as well as the dark shadows he has shown us; the picture would not have been complete without them all, for human nature is not so bad in any of its institutions but some trace may be found of God's image left among us. But, reader, peruse the book for yourself; ponder the point of seventy miles—ponder the passage over the runs—ponder the night at the "Mills House"—ponder the general face of the country—ponder the state of society—ponder over the difference in the growth and development of the South and the West, and render your verdict for or against the "peculiar institution," as one who expects to give an account of the talents which have been entrusted to him.

[Peekskill Messenger.

SLAVES BELONGING TO JOHN BELL OF TENNESSEE RELEASED.—On Saturday morning, two negroes named Nothington Lewis and Tusk Jesse, belonging to the late Presidential candidate and now prominent Rebel, John Bell of Tennessee, were emancipated by the District Provost-Marshal-General here. The slaves had been employed in the Cumberland Iron Works. [St. Louis Republican.

From Panama.

Our advices from Panama are to and including Aug. 23. From The Star of that date we extract the following:

FROM THE INTERIOR.

Curiosity is still on tiptoe to hear something trustworthy from the interior, but up to the present moment nothing has transpired, although the city is full of reports.

The Prefect has returned from his trip to Agua Dulce, and that appears to be all that is known.

Regarding the troops that left here in the beginning of the month, it is said they were committing great outrages on the people of Agua Dulce after their arrival there. Other reports state that they had been attacked while going up the river and defeated by Fabriga's forces, many of them being taken prisoners to Veragua.

THOSE DECREES.

A good deal of uneasiness is felt in Panama as to the time and manner of enforcing the recent decrees of Mosquera, especially that relating to paper money and mainmort, but as yet we have heard of no steps being taken in the matter. It is evident from the tone of the inhabitants that the paper-money arrangement won't meet with a favorable reception, as it is generally considered a humbug.

FROM BUENAVENTURA.

By the arrival of a small vessel, the Rosita, from Buenaventura, late news has been received from the interior, but as usual is untrustworthy. One report says the Mosquera party has been successful, while another report gives a great victory to Arboleda. It is certain that the Mosquera party have been obliged to send up their leading political prisoners to this place for transportation to Carthagena, probably being afraid to detain them where they are.

THE ABUSES ON THE STEAMER ARIEL.

By the last arrival from Panama we copied from The Star an account of gross and inhuman treatment of the hands on the steamer Ariel, of the Vanderbilt line, by the officers. The case of Michael Clare was referred to especially, who had been badly beaten. We now learn from The Star that an examination, instituted by Mr. Rice, U. S. Consul at Aspinwall, and Mr. McKee, Consul at Panama, has been had, by which all the main charges were verified. The Star also says:

Proofs were taken before the Prefect to show that Henry McCay, second officer of the Ariel, pulled a boy employed as a mess boy from his bed, pounded him in the face, threw him on deck, and kicked him until he was nearly lifeless, without any removal from the captain. Also, that the same officer knocked a man down on the deck of the ship at the wharf at Aspinwall, because the man told him he was mistaken in seizing a negro who had committed an outrage on board, that it was another man; and McCay afterward beat and kicked the man, when down, in the face, the captain looking on without interference. Also, that McCay struck a passenger in the face because he said it was a shame to kick a defenseless man in that way.

For these acts McCay was required to answer in the sum of $200, which, being unable to find, he was committed to prison for trial.

Mr. S. Keyes, 1st Engineer, was also made to give bonds in the sum of $200 to appear at a subsequent time, for kicking and beating his men.

Thos. Murray, 2d Assistant Engineer, got off for the same offense, simply because the act was committed on the high seas, the Consul not wishing any punishments to be made by the Prefect for offenses outside the jurisdiction of New Granada.

We learn that, in case of desertion from the ships in port, it is the custom of the lesser officers to go out on the line of the road with shackles, catch the men, iron them, carry them on board, and place them in confinement under deck till the ship sails, without any notification of the facts to the Consul. After McCay was committed to prison, the officers of the Ariel, including the master, went on board their vessel, pulled her out from the wharf, defied both the Consul and the authorities, and sent to Capt. Newcomb of the U. S. brig-of-war Perry to defend him. Capt. Newcomb returned answer to Capt. Miner that if he had any order from the U. S. Consul he had better obey it. Finding that Capt. Miner was determined to resist the legal authorities, the Prefect, not having sufficient force to take the officers from the ship, asked Mr. Rice for naval assistance, which Mr. R. immediately applied for by official letter to Capt. Newcomb, and obtained the same. On knowing this, the officers finally submitted, and the other cases were duly examined into.

Mr. Rice, the United States Consul at Aspinwall, submitted to Capt. Miner of the Ariel forty-one questions, embracing charges of barbarity on his vessel, all of which Capt. M. declined to answer.

Maine Republican Congressional Nominations.
