[From the June Atlantic Monthly.]

The Dead Ship of Harpswell.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

What flecks the outer gray beyond
The sundown's golden trail?
The white flash of a sea-bird's wing,
Or gleam of slanting sail?

Let young eyes watch from Neck and Point,
And sea-worn elders pray,—
The ghost of what was once a ship
Is sailing up the bay!

From gray sea-fog, from icy drift,
From peril and from pain,
The home-bound fisher greets thy lights,
O hundred-harbored Maine!
But many a keel shall seaward turn,
And many a sail outstand,
When, tall and white, the Dead Ship looms
Against the dusk of land.

She rounds the headland's bristling pines,
She threads the isle-set bay;
No spur of breeze can speed her on,
Nor ebb of tide delay.
Old men still walk the Isle of Orr
Who tell her date and name,
Old shipwrights sit in Freeport yards
Who hewed her oaken frame.

What weary doom of baffled quest,
Thou sad sea-ghost, is thine?
What makes thee in the haunts of home
A wonder and a sign?
No foot is on thy silent deck,
Upon thy helm no hand;
No ripple hath the soundless wind
That shifts thee from the land!

For never comes the ship to port
Howe'er the breeze may be;
Just when she nears the waiting shore
She drifts again to sea.
No tack of sail, nor turn of helm,
Nor sheer of veering side,
Stern-fore she drives to sea and night
Against the wind and tide.

In vain o'er Harpswell Neck the star
Of evening guides her in;
In vain for her the lamps are lit
Within thy tower, Segwin!
In vain the harbor-boat shall hail,
In vain the pilot call;
No hand shall reef her spectral sail,
Or let her anchor fall.

Shake, brown old wives, with dreary joy,
Your gray-head hints of ill;
And, over sick-beds whispering low,
Your prophecies fulfill.
Some home amid yon birchen trees
Shall drape its door with woe;
And slowly where the Dead Ship sails,
The burial boat shall row!

From Wolf Neck and from Flying Point,
From island and from main,
From sheltered cove and tided creek,
Shall glide the funeral train.
The dead-boat with the bearers four,
The mourners at her stern,—
And one shall go the silent way
Who shall no more return!

And men shall sigh, and women weep,
Whose dear ones pale and pine,
And sadly over sunset seas
Await the ghostly sign.
They know not that its sails are filled
By pity's tender breath,
Nor see the Angel at the helm
Who steers the Ship of Death!

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"Asphodel," a novel recently published by Ticknor & Fields," contains evidences of immature talent and the material of a good love-story; but the incidents are not well managed, and the style is remarkable for a riotous exuberance of words and a superfluity of metaphors.

Among other books recently issued by the same publishers are "The Masquerade and Other Poems," by John G. Saxe, characterized by the author's well-known neatness of expression and rollicking humor; "The South since the War," a volume of sketches by Sidney Andrews, the greater portion of which was originally communicated in the form of correspondence to The Boston Advertiser and The Chicago Tribune; and "Recent Advances in Ophthalmic Science," being the Boylston Prize Essay for 1865," by Henry W. Williams, M. D., illustrated with many excellent diagrams.

"The Treasury of Bible Knowledge," (London: Longmans, Green, & Co. New-York: Appleton & Co.) is an excellent and convenient dictionary of Scriptural proper names and other matters useful to the Biblical student. Full in its compass, compact in form, and enriched with engravings which are both plentiful and well-executed, it will no doubt obtain a wide and permanent popularity.

Little, Brown, & Co. have published the sixth volume of their admirable edition of "The Works of the Right Honorable Edmund Burke," comprising the fourth of the "Letters on a Regicide Peace," various letters and addresses on American affairs, a "Sketch of a Negro Code," and a number of letters on Catholic emancipation and other Irish questions.

LITERARY ITEM.

The London Printing and Publishing Company, formerly at No. 487 Broadway, have removed to their new rooms, No. 13 West Fourth-st., near Broadway. This house has commenced the publication of several new and valuable works in a serial form, among others the "Circle of Sciences," a work of great worth; a new Bible, with many illustrations on steel, and many improvements upon all existing editions; a superb edition of "Hogarth's Work," on large paper and new text, &c., &c. Mr. Brown, the manager, informs us that in future there will be a retail department for the benefit of those who wish single copies. A number of rare works are issued by this house.

Mr. Charles N. Emerson, of Pittsfield, Mass., whose "Internal Revenue Guide," published last year, had such a genuine success, purposes to compile another manual of the same sort, based upon the new Tax bill which is now before Congress. As soon as the bill becomes a law he will issue a carefully collated copy of the text, accompanied by full notes and references to every important decision of the different Commissioners, together with full tables, schedules, rates of tax, and other important matters. The book will be published by Samuel Bowles & Co., Springfield.

Mr. John Scandrett Harford, author of a "Life of Michael Angelo," and other works, recently died in England, aged 61. He is said to have been the hero of Hannah More's "Cœlebs in Search of a Wife."

We have a report that the correspondence and literary remains of the late Count Gurowski are to be published, for the benefit of his daughter.

It is, perhaps, not generally known that "Robinson Crusoe" has been mutilated almost past recognition since its first appearance; but the editors of the popular "Golden Treasury" series have restored the original text, and printed the narrative in their beautiful collection of volumes, just as it came from Defoe.
