NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"The American Art Journal, a Weekly Record of Music, Art, and Literature," edited by Henry C. Watson, has recently entered upon its fifth volume. It is a handsome and clearly-printed periodical of 16 pages, filled with criticisms on music, painting, and the drama; comments upon the current events of the artistic world; a careful record of public entertainments at home and abroad; musical, dramatic and literary gossip; poetry, and a good selection of essays and miscellaneous reading matter. To the large and daily increasing class of persons who take an interest in the subjects to which "The American Art Journal" devotes itself, this well-edited periodical ought to be a welcome visitor.

LITERARY ITEMS.

The Section of Politics, Legislation, and Finance in the French Academy has been suppressed, and its members have been distributed among other sections.

An association of women for the study of political economy has just been formed at Vienna.

The collection of sonnets prepared by Leigh Hunt, which we mentioned a few days ago as being in press in Boston, will be published by Roberts Brothers, and not by Ticknor & Fields. The volume will be printed from Leigh Hunt's own manuscript, and will contain an essay and numerous notes.

Among the most important new books recently announced in London are Vol. 2, Part ii. of Dean Alford's "New Testament for English Readers"; "The Two Books of Samuel, being Part iv. of the Holy Bible with Notes and Introductions, by the Ven. Chr. Wordsworth, D. D., Archdeacon of Westminster," "The Acts of the Deacons," a commentary on the Biblical notices of St. Stephen and St. Philip, by the Rev. E. M. Goulburn; "Homer and the Iliad," consisting of dissertations, commentaries, and an English metrical translation, by Prof. Blackie of Edinburgh; and a volume of sermons by the Bishop of Natal.

ROEBUCK: A CONFEDERATE NOVEL OF GREAT POWER, which is bound to have a large sale.
One volume. 12mo. Price, $1 75.
LOUISVILLE Journal.—"THE LAST SOUTHERN NOVEL.—'ROEBUCK.'—This new Southern work is a powerfully written Novel, depicting in graphic colors some of the scenes and horrors of the late war. The South and its institutions during the late memorable struggle are well portrayed. Connected with the scenes described in the book is a beautiful love romance, making the work doubly interesting and exciting. In future days, when people will want to read of the scenes of the late war, and of life during the 'so-called' Southern Rebellion, this book will be remembered."
The Cincinnati Commercial thus speaks of "Roebuck:" "This is a war novel, written by a Rebel, and is rather above the average of secesh literature. There is a good deal of politics, in proportion to the love in the book, and the battles of the late war, as seen from the Southern standpoint, come out strong."

By the Author of "The Heir of Redclyffe."

"This is one of Miss Yonge's prettiest and pleasantest stories. It is a tale of a young burgher maiden of the free town of Ulm, in the middle of the fifteenth century, who is carried away to the castle of one of the robber Barons of Swabia, attested on an eagle's crag, to nurse a sick daughter of their race; how she comforts and teaches the poor child, bringing a civilizing influence into the rough, boorish lawlessness of the free Baron's household; how she is beloved by the young Baron, who has been tamed by her gentleness and goodness; how he marries her secretly, and how he is treacherously set upon and killed, with his father and their retainers, as they are on their road to make their submission to the Kaiser, the father of the Emperor Maximilian; and how he spent his last breath in acknowledging his young wife and commending her to the care of the terrible old she-wolf, his mother, is charmingly told."—[Atheneum.
