LITERARY ITEMS.

J. B. Lippincott & Co. have issued specimen pages and a prospectus of a volume of "Studies in the Book of Psalms, being a Critical and Expository Commentary, with Doctrinal and Practical Remarks on the entire Psalter. By William S. Plumer, D. D., LL. D., Author of 'The Bible True,' 'Jehovah Jireh,' etc." The work will be comprised in one elegant royal 8vo. volume of over 1,200 pages.

The August number of Hunt's Merchants' Magazine and Commercial Review contains several articles especially pertinent to the present moment; among which are a paper on "Legislative Lobbying," à propos of a recent trial in Brooklyn; a statistical account of the "Financial and Commercial Condition of Chili;" the "Army, Navy and Population of Austria, Prussia and the German Confederation;" analyses of railroad reports, and a variety of other valuable and interesting matter.

Mr. John Russell Bartlett, Secretary of State of Rhode Island, whose bibliographical account of the "Literature of the Rebellion" we recently noticed, has in his library a mass of books, pamphlets, &c., relating to the war, which is said to be unrivaled for size and interest by any similar collection. In vast folios he has accumulated thousands of cuttings, both pictorial and printed, from innumerable journals, magazines, and ephemeral sheets, illustrating the passing fancies or panics of the hour; while his shelves are burdened with books, pamphlets, and various documents, in many different languages, relating to the Rebellion or its cause. It is scarcely possible to overestimate the importance of such a store of materials for the history of our times. The collection is too large and valuable to remain in the custody of a private individual and it is much to be desired that some one of our great public libraries should purchase it, and save it from the danger of dispersal or destruction.

A "Catholic Publication Society" has been started in New-York by the Rev. Isaac T. Hecker of the congregation of Paulists, its object being "to diffuse more widely Catholic truth, by the publication and distribution of tracts, pamphlets and other reading matter adapted to this end." The Archbishop of New-York is ex officio President; the other American archbishops are Vice-Presidents, and the bishops honorary members. Other persons become members by the payment of subscriptions. The publications of the Society are sold at a low price to clergymen or laymen who may be interested in distributing them. Nine short tracts have already been issued.

The "Spanish Papers and other Miscellanies, hitherto Unpublished and Uncollected, by Washington Irving," which Hurd & Houghton have announced, are nearly ready for delivery. Many of the papers are now first printed from the original manuscripts, and the remainder are almost entirely new to the present generation. The collection will fill two volumes. The first contains "The Legend of Don Roderick;" "Legend of Count Julian and his family;" "Legend of Pelayo;" "Abderahmoo, the Founder of the Dynasty of the Ommiades in Spain;" "Chronicle of Fernan Gonzales, Count of Castile;" "Chronicle of Fernando the Saint;" and "Spanish Romance." The second will comprise the "Letters of Jonathan Oldstyle, Gent.;" "Biographical Sketches;" and "Reviews and Miscellanies."

The September number of The Atlantic Monthly contains a third sonnet by Professor Longfellow, "On Translating the Divina Commedia":

I lift mine eyes, and all the windows blaze
With forms of Saints and holy men who died,
Here martyred and hereafter glorified;
And the great Rose upon its leaves displays
Christ's Triumph, and the angelic roundelays,
With splendor upon splendor multiplied;
And Beatrice, again at Dante's side,
No more rebukes, but smiles her words of praise.
And then the organ sounds, and unseen choirs
Sing the old Latin hymns of peace and love
And benedictions of the Holy Ghost;
And the melodious bells among the spires
O'er all the house-tops and through heaven above
Proclaim the elevation of the Host!

Among the "Passages from Hawthorne's Note-Books" we find the following remarks on Thoreau:

"CONCORD, Thursday, Sept. 1, 1842.—Mr. Thoreau dined with us yesterday. . . . He is a keen and delicate observer of nature—a genuine observer—which, I suspect, is almost as rare a character as even an original poet; and Nature, in return for his love, seems to adopt him as her especial child, and shows him secrets which few others are allowed to witness. He is familiar with beast, fish, fowl and reptile, and has strange stories to tell of adventures and friendly passages with these lower brethren of mortality. Herb and flower likewise, wherever they grow, whether in garden or wild wood, are his familiar friends. He is also on intimate terms with the clouds, and can tell the portents of storms. It is a characteristic trait that he has a great regard for the memory of the Indian tribes, whose wild life would have suited him so well; and, strange to say, he seldom walks over a plowed field without picking up an arrow-point, spear-head or other relic of the red man, as if their spirits wiled him to be the inheritor of their simple wealth.

"With all this he has more than a tincture of literature—a love and true taste for poetry, especially for the older poets, and he is a good writer—at least he has written a good article, a rambling disquisition on Natural History, in the last Dial, which, he says, was chiefly made up from journals of his own observations. Methinks this article gives a very fair image of his mind and character—so true, intimate, and literal in observation, yet giving the spirit as well as letter of what he sees, even as a lake reflects its wooded banks showing every leaf yet giving the wild beauty of the whole scene. Then there are in the articles passages of cloudy and dreamy metaphysics, and also passages where his thoughts seem to measure and attune themselves into spontaneous verse, as they lightfully may, since there is real poetry in them. There is a basis of good sense and moral truth, too, throughout the article, which also is a reflection of his character; for he is not untrue to think and feel, and I find him a healthy and wholesome man to know."

No. 156 Asylum-st., Hartford, Conn.

AGENTS WANTED for HORACE GREELEY'S "AMERICAN CONFLICT."

Vol. 1 of this History has met with unparalleled success—120,000 having already been sold—and is emphatically indorsed by the press of all parties, by leading Generals of the army, by the President, members of the Cabinet, Senators and Representatives in Congress, State governors, literary men, and by thousands politically opposed to the author.

Vol. II (and last) will be published in August, and will more than sustain the high character of the first. In its preparation, the vast amount of time, labor, and pains-taking research, devoted to a careful sifting of the mass of crude surface material adopted by earlier writers without verification, and to the collection of important information otherwise inaccessible or overlooked—including much from the Rebel archives—cannot fail, under the eminent qualifications of the author, to produce a record of surpassing excellence, which will supersede all former works on the subject. O. D. CASE & Co., Publishers, Hartford, Conn.
