NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SPARE HOURS. By John Brown, M. D. Second Series. 12mo. pp. 426. Boston: Ticknor & Fields.

Nobody who read "Rab and his Friends," or any of the other delightful essays comprised in Dr. Brown's former volume, will need much urging to make an acquaintance with the new collection of papers which he has lately presented to us. This second series contains an admirable notice of John Leech, reprinted from Macmillan's Magazine; two articles on Thackeray; a little dog-gossip; some miscellaneous biographical essays and sketches of Scottish scenery and celebrated places; and better than all, that wonderfully beautiful, amusing, pathetic, and laughable story of "Marjorie Fleming," which many of us probably know already, as it has been separately published. The lectures on "Health," though they are entitled "Five Lay Sermons to Working People," have their value for all classes. Dr. Brown is one of the most fascinating of living essayists, though he seems to take a wicked pleasure in violating all the rules of composition, and showing how entertaining he can be in spite of his literary transgressions. He lets his pen run on without restraint until he gets tired; he loads his pages with italics and quotations, dashes and parentheses; he involves himself at times in the most marvelously-twisted sentences, and he cares nothing whatever about connection between his sermon and his text; but then he is always entertaining, whole-souled, honest and hearty; he has a quick eye and a ringing laugh for the humorous and a tender touch for genuine pathos. If his essays were reduced to proportion and squared according to the rules of Blair's Rhetoric, they would lose half their charm. When Dr. Brown was called upon to read a lecture before a certain Young Men's Association in 1862, he began his discourse on the Pursuit of Truth, (which we have in this volume,) with a capital sketch of one "Jeems the Doorkeeper." What connection Jeems had with the pursuit of truth was not apparent until Dr. Brown explained it in the following anecdote: "One day, soon after I knew him, when I thought he was in a soft, confidential mood, I said: 'Jeems, what kind of weaver are you?' 'I'm in the fancical line, Maister John,' said he, somewhat stiffly; 'I like its licecence.'" "Now," continued the lecturer, "I am in the fancical line as well as Jeems;" and it was in virtue of its licecence that he wrote not only the lecture in question, but apparently every page of the book.

D. Appleton & Co. have now ready the second volume of the French text of the Emperor's Histoire de Jules César. The English translation is so bad that many people who have read the work through that unsatisfactory medium will be glad of this opportunity to make acquaintance with it in a more authentic shape.

"Appletons' Hand-Book of American Travel: the Southern Tour," by Edward H. Hall, is a convenient and, we believe, a very trustworthy guide, containing descriptive sketches of cities, towns, battle-fields, and all places of historical, natural, or fashionable interest, and maps of the leading routes of travel and of the principal cities.

Benedict's handy little volume of "New-York Railroad and Steamboat Time-Tables" for September has just been issued. It contains full time-tables of all the lines radiating from New-York, giving the times of departure not only from their termini, but also from way-stations.

APPLETONS' ARITHMETICAL SERIES: On the basis of the works of Geo. R. Perkins, LL.D. By G. P. Quackenbos, A. M.

No labor has been spared to make this series exactly what is required for the purpose of mental discipline, as well as for practical use in the daily business of life. It is clear, simple, thorough, comprehensive, logically arranged, well graded, is supplied with a great variety of examples, AND TEACHES THE METHODS ACTUALLY USED BY BUSINESS MEN.

The Series consists of a PRIMARY, an ELEMENTARY, a PRACTICAL, a HIGHER, and a MENTAL. The Primary (40 cts.), Elementary (60 cts.), and Practical (75 cts.), are now ready, and the others will speedily follow.

Teachers interested in using the best books are solicited to examine this series, which we claim possesses many advantages over those heretofore published.

Agents wanted in all parts of the United States to introduce these Arithmetics.

Also Published by the Undersigned,

CORNELL'S GEOGRAPHIES. Everywhere received with unqualified approval.
