NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Historical Magazine, under its new editor Mr. Henry B. Dawson, shows unwonted vitality. The August number, which has just appeared, is especially interesting and valuable. The leading article is a memorial to His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, written by Henry Laurens, President of the Continental Congress from 1776 to 1778, and afterward taken prisoner by the English while on his way to Holland as Minister Plenipotentiary. The memorial was drawn up while he was confined in the Tower of London, and after recapitulating the reasons why the writer deems himself entitled to lenient treatment, petitions for an abatement of the rigors of his imprisonment. The document, copied from the original in the possession of Mr. S. L. M. Barlow, is now published for the first time. In a note printed on a fly leaf Mr. Dawson invites particular attention to this memorial as "a remarkable exposure of infidelity to the country among the leaders of the Revolution." We cannot think his opinion justified. Mr. Laurens exhibits himself as a conservative and perhaps rather timid man, who cherished to the very last the hope of a peaceful solution of the difficulties between the mother-country and the colonies, and did not enter the revolutionary movement until he was dragged into it by others; but everybody knew that he was all this before, and though he exhibits in his memorial little of the calm dignity of the suffering patriot, but rather the not unnatural eagerness of a prisoner to palliate his offense by showing previous good conduct, we see no ground for charging him with treachery to his country. A more important contribution to the history of the revolution is the elaborate defense of Gen. Gates by Gen. Thomas Pinckney, one of his aids, now first printed. We have also a letter from Winfield Scott to Col. Jessup, containing some interesting strictures on the battle of Lundy's Lane; an article on the early American Methodists, showing that there was no Methodist church in this country before 1785; an essay on "North American Rock Writing," by Thos. Ewbank; continuations of the "Trial of Joshua Hett Smith" for complicity in Arnold's treason, and of "Old New-York Revived," including a curious account of the old taverns of the city; a careful review of Moore's "Notes on the History of Slavery in Massachusetts," and various other matters.

The Methodist Centenary Magazine is the title of a new periodical, published at Pittsburgh, by the Centenary Committee, for the National Local Preachers' Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and edited by the Rev. W. H. Kincaid. The first number, which bears no date, is apparently designed only as an experiment. It contains several interesting contributions and is well printed.

In an advance notice made by the Methodist Quarterly, Dr. Whedon says: Mr. Barnes developes into full expansion the analogy between the individual and the Nation, the Man and the Republic. He carries the analogy into minute details without complexity or fulsomeness, and evolves many a lesson. Those who would study political philosophy without overmuch weariness will find these pages at once attractive and instructive, and those who are called upon to discuss such topics before a popular audience will find them suggestive.

Mlle. ROSTAN, having entirely recovered her health, will re-open her School on TUESDAY, the 2d day of October next.

FARRAND'S COLLEGIATE ACADEMY, No. 695 Sixth-ave., between Thirty-ninth and Fortieth-sts., Reopens Sept. 17. See Circular.
The undersigned have had the best opportunities for testing practically the skill, method and spirit of Mr. Farrand, as a Teacher, their own children, or children under their immediate care or observation, having been entrusted to his tuition; and we take great pleasure in commending his work as peculiar in its thoroughness and completeness.
We are convinced that Mr. Farrand is more than the bearer of recitations; he teaches his pupils how to study; he does not so crowd his pupils as to make the home only a study, or the school-room only a recitation room; he considers the temperament and capacity of each pupil in the endeavor not to destroy, but to educate the individuality of each. And he seems to us to value not merely the quantity, but also the quality of learning; not merely the accumulation of facts, but the discipline of powers. He is conscientious in his work, and commends to an unusual degree the sympathy and affection of his pupils.
