true Southern man should pray to God for as fervently as they prayed for the success of Gen. Lee when he was invading Pennsylvania."

A Tennessee correspondent of an Ohio paper states the following:

"A Sunday since a returned Rebel chaplain was talking with Chaplain E. about the return of some confiscated Rebel property. At length the Rebel chaplain (Plummer by name) replied hopefully: 'Well, we have a good friend at Washington.' 'And who is he?' asks Chaplain E. 'Andrew Johnson,' replied Plummer, 'and he showed his friendship to us at New Orleans.'"

Gen. Butler, having discussed the justice of hanging Robert E. Lee for his share in the Andersonville crime, The Mobile Tribune thus anathematizes:

"Hang Robert E. Lee! It is highly just that such a sentiment of itself should be uttered by so appropriate a medium as Beast Butler. It would have burned to a cinder, during utterance, any other than Butlerian lips. It required cheeks of iron [illegible] to give passage without bursting asunder, to such a sentiment. A simple thief would have failed in the attempt to give it voice; a common murderer would not have undertaken it; an ordinary coward would have been ashamed of it; a moderate liar would have broken down in the attempt. It required a perfect combination of the whole—liar, coward, thief and murderer, in the foul person of the Massachusetts hero, to complete the incarnate fiend capable of standing up in full assembly and coolly making the proposition to hang Gen. Robert E. Lee."

The Memphis Avalanche understands that "a move is on foot to invite Henry Ward Beecher to visit Memphis, and to enlighten our people as to their duty in the existing crisis." The Avalanche thinks that if "Mr. Beecher comes of his own accord he should have a respectful hearing if he behaves himself; but he is, nevertheless, "a Puritan peddler of religion and politics." Let us not be deceived by the small demonstration he has recently made in our behalf. His craven soul," &c. This is too bad; and we doubt if Memphis is yet prepared to give Mr. Beecher a safe hearing.

In our County Board of Supervisors, a few days since,

Supervisor Tweed, Chairman of the Committee on Annual Taxes, presented the county tax levy, with the following amendments: For payment of interest on bonds issued for the payment of taxes in error, $[illegible]; for payment to the Commissioners of Record for completing the indexes, $100,000; for an additional appropriation for cabinets and drill-rooms, $50,000. The levy and amendments were then adopted.

—We should like to know that there is some prospect that our taxpayers are ever to be done with paying those "Commissioners of Record." Their job was a barefaced swindle from the start, and we have bought them off at least twice already. Is this $100,000 to be their very last grab?

NEW-YORK.

THE REGISTRY—IMPORTANT!

To the Editor of The N. Y. Tribune.

SIR: By the act of 1866, the third meeting for Registry of voters (Monday before election) is abolished. There are now but two meetings—the Tuesday, three weeks before election, and the Friday before election.

Editors throughout the State will please call attention to this change in the law. Respectfully,

FRANCIS C. BARLOW, Secretary of State.

Albany, Oct. 6, 1866.

The following letter from District-Attorney A. Oakey Hall, issued on Saturday, will be of general interest and value:

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW-YORK, DISTRICT-ATTORNEY'S OFFICE, Oct. 6, 1866.

DEAR SIR: To your various inquiries upon the Registration act I answer—First, that the registration process of 1866 will differ only from that of last year (1865) in omitting the day before election.

Second: As in 1865, so now, the registrars meet upon the Tuesday three weeks before election (October 16, 1866), to make a register of voters. In districts where more than 400 votes were polled in 1865, but only in such districts, they sit also during the next day (Wednesday, October 17). They must sit until 9 p. m.; but they may sit until the day closes, at 12 p. m. of each day—whether of the Tuesday set apart for districts that polled less than 400 votes, or of the Wednesday additional to Tuesday for districts that polled more than 400 votes.

Third: Then there are two more days for registration. The first day or days just spoken of (16th and 17th October) were days for making register. These two additional days, being the Friday and Saturday prior to election (election day will be November 6, and Friday will be November 2, and Saturday will be November 3), and being two days common to every election district, are days for revising, correcting, adding to and subtracting names from the registers that were previously made. Upon these revisory days the inspectors must also sit until 9 p. m., but may sit until the days are ended at midnight.

Fourth: Thus there are three registration days in every district, and in some districts (being those having more than 400 voters) there are four days.

[illegible] each day, in New-York and Brooklyn, personal presence [illegible] registry [illegible] was [illegible] polls. [illegible] New-York and Brooklyn [illegible] is "placed" on the register. The word for the other districts is "added" to the register.

Other directions are superfluous under the full instructions issued by the Board of Police and the Secretary of State.

I conclude by saying that General Barlow's card related evidently only to the two days of revision. His property called public attention to the fact that since last year the number of revisory days had been reduced from three to two. Nothing in his card conflicts with the provisions respecting the one or two prior days of making the registers, as a process antecedent to revising them on the two latter days.

Very truly yours, A. OAKEY HALL.
GEORGE W. BLUNT, Inspector of Registry, &c.

The resolutions are as follows:

Resolved, That the Congressional delegation from this Ward be [illegible], and urge the nomination of Mr. Spencer as a man [illegible] exalted patriotism and his long and faithful service [illegible] Republican cause.

BROOKLYN.

THE RATIFICATION MEETING AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The "grand ratification meeting" of the citizens of Brooklyn who support the reconstruction policy of President Johnson was attended by a crowd that filled very respectably the Academy of Music in that city. Although the combined instrumentalities of bonfires, bands of music, calcium lights, processions and all the other usual means of "drumming up" were as liberally employed as is usual with the managers of the Johnson mass meetings, the upper galleries remained almost empty until late in the evening. The opening of the meeting was perhaps somewhat deferred on this account. It was not until the band stationed in the orchestra had exhausted its repertoire and the audience then began to manifest its impatience by stamping that Mr. E. J. Lowber, Chairman of the Democratic General Committee, came forward and announced Major-Gen. H. W. Slocum as permanent Chairman of the meeting.

SPEECH OF GEN. SLOCUM.

Three cheers for Gen. Slocum were called for from the platform, which being given, the General said that to secure the triumph of the Conservative party in the coming election, it was necessary only to bring the issues plainly before the people. At the last election the two parties were moving on parallel lines. Both parties supported the President, and professed to support the Constitution. If there had been a change in this line it had not been in the Democratic party. They still supported the President; but the Republican orator when he would secure applause now talked of impeaching and even of hanging the President. If the constitutional amendment were adopted the partisan warfare would still be kept up, as nothing would satisfy the Radical agitators. There was time enough to amend the Constitution when peace was restored. With regard to the ticket the best and purest men of the party were put foremost upon it, and that they would be sustained by the people there was not the shadow of a doubt.

Mr. John Cooney, the secretary of the club, then commenced to read the lengthy list of Vice Presidents and Secretaries, when Mayor Hoffman entered the stage, and at the bidding of the band which played "Hail to the Chief," the house cheered.

The resolutions were here introduced; they were as follows:

Resolved, That the peace, prosperity and liberty of the American people demand the prompt admission of the lawful representatives of the South to the Congress of the nation, and a full restoration of the Federal Union, with all the rights of the several States unimpaired.

Resolved, That for the accomplishment of these high purposes we pledge to the President of the United States our cordial support.

SPEECH OF MAYOR HOFFMAN.

Mr. Hoffman was then introduced. He spoke at great length, in substance as follows: We were on the eve of an election which was of vast importance. The country had just emerged from a war of great magnitude and severity. The American people were now called to show that they could be as magnanimous and self-sacrificing in time of peace as in time of war. The war had been waged by the North with all its energy to establish the great principle that the Union was perpetual. This principle was now secure, but we find the war still going on. The contest was not between Congress and the President, but between Congress and the Constitution. It was a contest in which the President took his stand on the Constitution; it was a contest in which the people said that the minority had rights to be respected as well as the majority, in accordance with Jefferson's doctrine that majorities should regard the rights of minorities. Such great events as the Rebellion brought about great political changes. The conservative men of all parties were now banded together to see that the Constitution and the power of the President should not be destroyed to further the designs of a Radical faction. The Philadelphia Convention, composed of all parties, had assembled with a similar purpose. In accordance with the policy and principles there enunciated, the Convention at Albany had adopted a ticket of which he had the honor of being at the head. He felt it his duty, therefore, to let the people learn his views on certain national subjects. The war that our brothers and friends had shed their blood for, was waged with the object of preserving the Union and maintaining the supremacy of the Constitution. When that end was accomplished they laid down their arms, for Congress had declared that the war ought to cease at this point.

That this declaration of Congress was the sentiment of the people was shown by the conventions of the people held at that time everywhere. The resolutions of the Baltimore Convention were to this effect, and after such declarations how can those claiming to be Republicans but whom he calls Radicals, say they are supporting the principles of that Convention?

Although it had there been solemnly affirmed that the abolition of slavery and the repudiation of the Rebel debt—the inevitable results of the war—were all the ends desired, new issues had been sprung upon the people.

Mr. Hoffman then read voluminous extracts from the papers of the day to show that the policy of Congress in 1864 was essentially the policy of the President to-day, in relation to the conditions imposed under which the rebellious States were to be reorganized. All these States had essentially complied with these conditions, and why then were not the States united? He was now addressing men of all parties, and he wished to say to such Republicans as were present that their leaders had abandoned their principles and betrayed their party. Reading the resolutions of the State Convention of last year, he remarked that there was nothing in them that hinted at further amendments of the Constitution. The Radicals then had deserted the fair principles then avowed in still keeping the States asunder. He then reviewed the measures of Congress for excluding the representatives of the Southern States. He examined the proposed Constitutional amendment. The change in the basis of representation was not objectionable; he would advocate it himself if it were presented as a single issue, and so would the best statesmen of the South. But there was this great principle involved—where did Congress get the power it exercises to impose conditions prior to the admission of the States to their Constitutional rights? It was, too, a fraud attempted on the people to submit these amendments in groups. Congress did not dare to submit the question of the change in the basis of representation to the South as a single issue; but they put it to them in connection with one which calls on them to proscribe as infamous their fathers and brothers and friends. Whether right or wrong, no people with any nobleness of spirit or any manhood would subscribe to any such condition. The submission to them of this amendment, which Congress knows they will never accept, is expressly intended and calculated to keep them out, and with the purpose of thus enabling the Radical faction to rule over the next election. When Congress says the ratification of this amendment is the condition of admission to representation, it says falsely, for it does not intend to admit them if it is adopted. The leading Radical authorities had openly stated that the amendment had nothing to do with the admission of the Southern States; that Congress had not pledged itself to admit them in any event, but had [illegible] their admission. The speaker then touched upon the demands for guarantees from the South. Would New-England be ready to engage that she would not rebel in the event of future combinations of the Western States against her peculiar policy? No paper agreement can guarantee [illegible]. The best guarantee of the South was her ruined cities, desolated lands, blighted households. A far less strong guaranty was the great and growing power and prosperity of the North. Would a dozen less representatives in Congress from the South overthrow that? So much for guarantees. The North needed guarantees as much as the South, for the Radical faction, unless their power be broken, [illegible] negro suffrage. They would have nothing short of negro suffrage. There was no middle ground; the Radical leaders would force this, and the people could not stop short of it. Mr. Sumner, in his last speech, had avowed plainly his platform to be the ballot and a homestead to every [illegible] in the South.

Mr. Hoffman concluded with a pledge to advance to the utmost of his ability the best interests of the State, if he should be called to fill the office of her chief magistrate.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hoffman's address a letter was read from Gov. Dix, and apologies made for the non-appearance of Mr. Postmaster-Gen. Randall, who had been advertised to speak.

Speeches were made by Mr. S. C. Courtney and A. B. Dawson of Georgia, and the meeting adjourned.

FIFTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT UNION REPUBLICAN NOMINATION.

The Union Republicans of this District have placed in nomination for the Assembly Mr. Frederick P. Preston, a gentleman of culture and statesmanlike ability. Republican and well-known citizen, and who has, at the solicitation of several leading Republicans of the district, consented to accept the nomination. As the district is overwhelmingly Republican, with two Democratic competitors in the field, there can be no doubt of Mr. Preston's election. The [illegible] differences at present existing in the district will undoubtedly be reconciled and all unitedly press forward to a common victory.

SEVENTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT UNION REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

This Convention met on Saturday evening, and after a very stormy session [illegible] Ira Buckman, jr., Mr. Buckman's competitor for the nomination was Capt. John Parsons, and the [illegible] of the Convention and up to the eleventh ballot [illegible] the delegates [illegible] Capt. Short [illegible] Mr. Buckman and [illegible]. [illegible] the announcement of the vote. S. P. Madden charged Mr. Buckman with [illegible] and corruption relative to a legislative transaction. [illegible] with one Frank Swift, who read an affidavit to that effect. Mr. Buckman indignantly denounced the charge [illegible] "I pronounce it false." He then said that Mr. Swift and declared that he paid the Common Council $[illegible] for the Barren Island contract and that it cost him $4,000 to get the Mayor's signature to it.

SECOND CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

The whole Democratic party, embracing every faction known as Mozart, Tammany, Conservatives, Sykeys, Softs and Hards, are intensely excited over the nomination to be made in the Second District for Congress. Henry has any much on the board. The votes of the delegates to the Convention are held as high as $1,000 each. Ex-Mayor Kalbfleisch seems to be regarded as having the inside track. Dennis Barnes, however, is understood to be using his own down to the quarter. Money for the nomination while Mr. E. C. [illegible], the [illegible] king, is said to be ready to insert a [illegible] at the proper moment that shall give him the [illegible]. Ex-Congressman Lewis G. Bergen [illegible] [illegible] town delegates "In the [illegible]," who [illegible] cling to him with great [illegible], and upon whom he relies to the end. In the meanwhile Wm. C. Dewitt [illegible] buildings [illegible] deemed [illegible] of its being the nucleus of a triumphant majority.

SEVENTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT NOMINATION.

The Republicans of the VIIth Assembly District on Saturday night nominated the Hon. Ira Buckman, jr., to represent them in the State Legislature. The proceedings in the Nominating Convention were rather exciting in their nature. Capt. John P. Short of the Fourteenth Ward was before the convention for a nomination, and the delegates from his ward supported him while those from the Thirteenth Ward supported Mr. Buckman.

A tie vote was therefore the result up to the eighth ballot, when a recess for 15 minutes was taken. On the reassembling of the Convention, Delegate John H. Percy of the Fourteenth Ward in an excited manner, stated that an outsider present had threatened him with personal violence if he exercised his right of voting for whom he pleased; but that, although he had previously voted for Capt. Short, he now intended to vote for Mr. Buckman. This declaration was received with hisses, cheers and yells, and the greatest confusion prevailed until the appearance of Capt. Woglom of the Forty-first Precinct, when order was partially restored. The Hon. S. T. Madden, a delegate from the Fourteenth Ward, then arose and stated that, although it was disagreeable to him, he would be compelled to read an affidavit made by a well-known citizen charging Mr. Buckman with corruption in the last Legislature. He said he felt it due to the great Union party that the characters of the men who solicited their confidence should be known to them. He then read an affidavit, signed by Francis Swift, the substance of which was that Mr. Buckman received from him the sum of $[illegible] on a promise of getting a hard contract at his hands, but that he failed to fulfil his part of the bargain, and he was therefore compelled to resort to legal proceedings to have the $400 refunded.

Loud calls were then made for Mr. Buckman to come forward and answer the affidavit. That gentleman promptly mounted the platform and said: "Gentlemen, standing before, in presence of Almighty God, I say that affidavit is false." Mr. Buckman then proceeded at length to detail all the business transactions he had with Mr. Swift, and closed by saying that that gentleman once told him that he paid the Brooklyn Common Council $20,000 for the Barren Island contract, and that the Mayor's signature to it cost him $4,000.

MARINE DISASTER.

TERRIBLE DISASTER ON THE SANTIAGO DE CUBA.

The steamship Santiago de Cuba, Capt. Smith, hence on the 29th September for San Juan, Nic., having experienced a severe gale on the 3d inst., at 3 a. m. was struck by a heavy sea, which washed overboard five of the crew, also started her stern, sprung her rudder, swept away a part of the house on deck, and caused the ship to leak very badly.

OBITUARY.

ALDERMAN DILLON, M. P., IRELAND.

The National party in Ireland and the Reform party in England, with which it recently formed an alliance, have sustained a serious loss in the death of Alderman Dillon, M. P. for Tipperary, in Ireland, which took place near Dublin on the evening of September 16. His death will awaken feelings of sincere regret among the bar and commercial circles of this city, to whom, during a residence of several years, his pure integrity and almost womanly gentleness of character had warmly endeared him. Early in youth Mr. Dillon had a religious turn of mind, and spent some years in study in the Royal College of Maynooth with the intention of taking orders in the Roman Catholic Church.

He subsequently abandoned this intention, and entering Trinity College, became one of the brilliant band of students headed by Thomas Davis, from which the Young Ireland party sprung. In consequence of that connection, he had to fly to this country in 1848, and pursued the forensic profession for some years in this city with eminent success, in partnership with the present distinguished Corporation Counsel, Mr. Richard O'Gorman. A few years ago, he returned to Ireland, and, resuming the practice of his profession, was induced to reenter the arena of politics, and has since the commencement of the present session of Parliament been one of the representatives of the County of Tipperary in the House of Commons. Exile and experience had considerably modified his early views of state events given there discretion to their action. So much so that even during the short period he occupied a position in the House, there were very few who commanded more influence or higher respect. He was justly regarded as the head of a powerful party in Ireland, and was also looked on as the moderator of that party. He was a man eminently fitted to play a great and useful role in the present peculiar condition of Irish politics, and his death cannot be regarded as other than a national calamity. The party to which he belonged possesses many able men intellectually, but none combining those qualities of heart with head which made Mr. Dillon beloved wherever his presence fell. He was not in any means a man of extraordinary ability, and was even indolent in action, but he was a deep thinker, a fluent speaker and writer, and a thoroughly honest man—full to the brim of generosity, charity, gentleness and magnanimity. His pure nature was not touched with a stain of ambition and yet he was fast, through influence of character, obtaining a position of power in Ireland, second only to that held by Mr. O'Connell. His illness was of brief duration. His death has called forth in Ireland an expression of deep and intense sorrow. Let us hope that his virtues may bear good fruit for the land he so dearly loved, and inspire others of her public men with that pure sentiment of patriotism and spotless integrity of action which animated him and which, we regret to think, he was almost the first to introduce into Irish politics.

Rooms, No. 8 30 Broadway, corner of Twenty-fifth-st.

NEW-YORK, Oct. [illegible], 1866.

To the Board of Commissioners created by the act to provide for improving the pavement of Broadway in the City of New-York:

GENTLEMEN: The object for which this Society was created is indicated by its title, will we trust, be a sufficient apology for presenting our views for improving the pavement of Broadway, and we avail ourselves of the opportunity afforded by your published notice inviting plans and proposals for such improvement, to state our own notions on the subject and to offer a few suggestions.

On the 21st of May last the Society appointed a committee on the subject matter of pavements "in reference to the cruelty to animals caused by their present condition," with power to add to their number. The following gentlemen composed the committee: Messrs. Jas. Brown, August Belmont, Charles Astor Bristed, Frank Leslie, Benjamin R. Winthrop, and the Secretary of the Society, ex officio.

The committee met and organized on the 26th of May, and subsequently added to their number the Hon. John T. Hoffman and Alfred W. Craven, esq.

Since this, several meetings have been held, and different experts have been examined, in reference to the best mode of accomplishing the object proposed. Many gentlemen have also attended who have expressed an interest in relieving the suffering brute, who is compelled to feel his way over the rugged and slippery pavements of the metropolis, and the committee with the single view of ascertaining the best mode of construction of a pavement which would conduce to the comfort and security of the horse, examined the subject in all its aspects, and, after much consideration and deliberation, have arrived at the conclusions which they now briefly lay before you.

In the course of their proceedings one of their number was appointed a sub-committee and was requested to institute inquiries into the advantages possessed by the Nicholson pavement, now in use in Chicago, and other cities of the West. He was [illegible] requested to exert his influence to procure the laying of a block of that description of pavement in some street in this city. The gentleman so appointed at once made the necessary inquiry, and was successful in procuring the ordering of a block of the kind of pavement referred to, to be laid in Nassau-st., between Pine and Wall-sts., which was immediately put down, and has been in use for several weeks past.

It is to the merits of that pavement that we respectfully crave the attention of your commission.

Composed of asphalte or coal tar, gravel and wood, it has proven to be smooth and noiseless and affords a perfectly sure and pleasant foothold for the horse. He never slips on it. We are informed that it has been used in Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, San Francisco and other places, where, on account of [illegible] qualities, it has superseded every other kind of pavement.

The climate and soil of this island are peculiarly favorable to its adoption here, and having been so fully and successfully tested in the places named, it seems strange that the metropolis of the continent should not have taken the [illegible] so valuable an improvement.

It is not, however, within the purview of the charter of this society to consider the question of pavements further than with reference to the "Prevention of Cruelty to Animals." The present stone pavement on our streets, and especially on Broadway, has been for years a source of distress to horses and considerable drivers. Scarcely a day passes that we do not see horses so crippled in consequence of the really horrible condition of our [illegible] that they have to be killed in order to put them out of misery. No owner of a good horse, no humane man, is [illegible] in the habit of driving on Broadway if he can avoid it, [illegible] because of the hard, uneven, slippery condition of the pavement. It seems to us that the time has arrived when all this should cease, when our humanity should no longer be shocked by the cruel exhibitions we are daily almost hourly compelled to witness, and when instead of a torture, it will be a pleasure to drive on Broadway.

In view, therefore, of the especial object referred to, the society has no design in suggesting it respectfully but urgently recommending to your consideration the immediate adoption of Nicholson pavement as the best mode for the improvement of the pavement of Broadway.

HENRY BERGH, President.
WM. COVENTRY H. WADDELL, Secretary.

To the Public.

After forty-three years of business prosperity, we may be pardoned if we give expression to our satisfaction at being able to say that the house of CHICKERING & SONS still maintains the foremost position among manufacturers of Piano-fortes. Our house was the first which successfully competed with the imported instruments; and, encouraged by our example, other manufacturers rapidly sprung up, increasing the competition, so that, in less than half a century, the foreign instruments have been completely driven out of the market, and the tide of export is now turned in the opposite direction.

It is no idle boast to say to-day that American Piano-fortes are unsurpassed in the world; that in three grades, the Grand, the Square, and the Upright, such improvements have been effected here that European makers are now compelled to copy us. The superiority of the American Piano is acknowledged by every European artist who visits our shores, and none of them dream of bringing their instruments with them, because of the fact that the Chickering Grand meets all their wants, and surpasses all other instruments in the exhibition of tone, in the power of giving the most exquisite coloring to every thought and sentiment of the composer or the player.

All the great artists who have visited America have used the Chickering Pianos. Thalberg, the greatest piano virtuoso, pronounced them unequaled in this country and unsurpassed in Europe. Gottschalk, so them, has achieved his greatest triumphs; and Wehli says: "I play on them with the profoundest satisfaction, conscious that whatever ability I may possess can be best displayed in their use; and I believe that in every particular your Pianos are, for the reason given, superior to any I have ever seen in this country or in Europe."

Ours were the first American Pianos placed against those of European manufacture, at the World's Fair in England, in 1851, when, in spite of prejudice and competition, they took the medal. Our Pianos response to the reform they the system first introduced by us, first of the complete iron frame, which was highly approved of, and gave rise to the expression of, "Pianos made upon the American plan."

Chickering & Sons first used the large scales for Square Pianos, from which has sprung all the general excellence of that class of instruments.

Chickering & Sons have manufactured over 30,000 Pianos, and it is calculated by those curious in such subjects, that that house has supplied one-quarter of all the instruments in the United States.

We claim to have been in advance in all the improvements which have been made in the manufacture of Pianos up to the present time. Our Pianos have stood the test of over forty years of wear and public criticism, and we have recently exchanged one of them made anterior to 1830, which was in as perfect order as on the day it left the factory. It is this thorough and substantial manufacture which has sustained the reputation of the house, and enables us to look back without shame upon our work of former years.

Our house is purely an American house, and is conducted upon American principles. In our factory, which is larger by one-third than any manufactory of the kind in this country and infinitely superior in elaborate and costly machinery, there are workmen who commenced with the house as boys, and every department is directed by American skill, judgment, and enterprise.

Our instruments are made in lots; the quality used for every part is thoroughly seasoned, and of the very best materials that can be procured. No part is slighted. What the public eye might pass over never escapes the watchful foreman. Every part, inside and out, is honestly, faithfully, and thoroughly made, so that it will bear the most minute examination.

The Chickering tone is recognized all over the country; it differs from the loud, coarse tone of most pianos, which is bad in the beginning and grows worse every day, remaining as it is refined and delicate, pure in its vibrations, delightful to the singing capacity, and has all the power, without noise, necessary to produce every legitimate effect.

We claim for our pianos that they are the best, the most lasting, and consequently the cheapest. We have not, like other houses, raised our prices beyond what the exigencies of the times demand. We have always been content with a fair profit, and our prices are only increased in strict ratio with the increased cost of material and labor.

Our sales this year have been immense, and the demand at the store is unparalleled. But the public may depend upon this—that, however great the demand may be upon our manufacturing resources, we will not slight any portion of the work to secure a sale. We intend that every Chickering Piano shall be equal to its high reputation, and that a good article is a certain recommendation, and the best friend of the manufacturer, for it will always extend his praises.

We call particular attention to our new style Grands, Squares and Uprights, which have met with the most brilliant encomiums from the Press and profession. By general acclamation they are pronounced the finest Piano-fortes in the world.

Trusting that our constant endeavors in the line of improvements will secure to us a continuance of the unbounded favors awarded us by the purchasing public, we are the public's obedient servants,

CHICKERING & SONS,
No. 652 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.
