I.
VOL. 2, BEING THE CONCLUDING VOLUME OF
THE DESCENT OF MAN, AND
SELECTION IN RELATION TO SEX.
BY CHARLES DARWIN, M. A., F. R. S.
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.
Price $2 per volume. The 2 vols. may be had bound to match, price $4.
From The Union Herald.
"We can find no fault with Mr. Darwin's facts, or the application of them. He piles them up in a stupendous pyramid—each stone supporting and taking strength from each—which crushes our opposition."
From The Evening Bulletin.
"This theory is now indorsed by many eminent scientists, who at first combated it, including Sir Chas. Lyell, probably the most learned of living geologists."
From The Charleston Courier.
"Whether you like his discourse or not—though you may refuse to acquiesce in his conclusions—still you are compelled to hear witness that this man has not been laboring to find facts to support a preconceived theory—but that the theory is the irrepressible outgrowth of his accumulated facts."
II.

GOETHE'S FAUST.
Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. Part Second, completing the work. 1 vol. Imperial 8vo. Uniform with Longfellow's Dante and Bryant's Homer. $5. The entire Work, 2 vols.: Cloth, $10; Half Calf, $20.
No translation of the Second Part of "Faust" has heretofore been published in the United States. The four or five English versions were produced before the German critics had discovered the true key to Goethe's meaning, and therefore give a very inadequate representation of the original. None of them reproduces the great richness and variety of the German metres, or is accompanied with notes which satisfactorily explain the more difficult passages of the poem.
Mr. Taylor's translation is the only one which completely gives the form of the original, and which also contains those illustrations which the reader needs in order to follow Goethe's grand design. The Second Part has often been looked upon as a sealed book to most readers; but, since the true interpretation has been discovered and is generally accepted in Germany, the time has arrived when the stores of Beauty and of Wisdom contained in the work should be made accessible to all who appreciate the passion and pathos of the First Part.
SUCCESS AND ITS CONDITIONS.
By Edwin P. Whipple. 1 vol. 12mo. $1 50.
CONTENTS:
Young Men in History; The Ethics of Popularity; Grit; The Vital and the Mechanical; The Economy of Incentives; The Sale of Souls; The Tricks of Imagination; Cheerfulness; Material and Moral Pauperism; The Genius of Dickens; Shoddy; John A. Andrew.
The leading idea of this book is, that nothing really succeeds which is not based on reality; that show, in a large sense, is never successful; that in the life of the individual, as in the more comprehensive life of the State, profession is nothing and power is everything. It is a book of high graphic value, and cannot fail of winning great favor among all thoughtful readers.
