FRUITS AND BERRIES.

The additions this week are wheat berries from Florida—good, but not wanted—gooseberries from Maryland, cherries from Virginia and Maryland, and strawberries from New-Jersey. It is impossible to give a correct idea of the strawberry market of to-day. We will call the trade in a sadly demoralized state, caused, first, by very large receipts, with reports of 2,500 crates for to-morrow by Virginia steamer alone; secondly, by the late hour at which much of the fruit got upon the stands, and, thirdly, by the poor condition of a part of it. The most intelligent sales we can give is to call fine Virginia, Delaware, and Maryland seedlings 20@25c., at the opening this morning, soon declining to 10@15c., and closing at 12@15c., with many left to-light. Common fruit sold at 7@10c. Jersey small baskets, called half-pints, small bulked fruit, sold at 6@7c., this morning, with lots offering at 2c., to-light. Cherries have quite a range from 1½@15c. per ℔ for ordinary red, to 20@25c. for fine fruit. Gooseberries sold slowly. Quotations:

MILK.

Receipts for the past week, upon the principal roads, average per day: Erie road and branches, 2,800 cans milk; 3 tubs, and 140 cans cream; Harlem, 3,300 cans milk; New-Haven, with branches, 1,200, and 850 by Hudson River. Total daily receipts, 9,250 cans milk. Sales on the Harlem platform began at $1 and closed at 60c. ₱ can, averaging 84c. ₱ can. The milk agent of the Harlem Road, Mr. F. T. Hopkins, thus speaks of the trade: "Milk has not been so plenty during the past four years, especially on the Harlem Road. Farmers are holding back somewhat on the other roads, and they should do so on this. One cent per day held back by each farmer and made into butter would relieve the market of the present glut, and help sustain the prices. Cans are less safe when held, and scattered about as they generally are in a glutted market. Beside falling to 60c. per can to-day, there were 500 cans left unsold at the Harlem depot."
