THE GOSSIP IN LITERATURE.

NOTES FROM ABROAD.

NEW-BRIGHTON, Sept. 10.—A specially notable piece of literary news which has just come from England is in the promise of a new book by Mr. Francis Galton. It is an outgrowth and elaboration of the subjects he discussed in his volume on "Hereditary Genius," and is to carry the title of "English Men of Science." It is reported that the book will contain very complete statistics of the intellectual inheritance and nurture of the scientific men of England. Another book announced to appear positively in October is the late Mr. Mill's work on Religion. The tendency of modern feminine writers to walk away from poetry and fiction into the ways of graver thought is illustrated by a small volume by Mrs Fawcett, which is about to be published by Macmillan. It is called "Tales in Political Economy," and is meant to be probably a sort of economic science made easy. The similar tales written so many years ago by Harriet Martineau are said to have given to the small and studious Princess Victoria much "valuable information," which has since been effectively used by the Queen. Mrs. Fawcett's ideas and illustrations are younger by many a year, but it is to be doubted whether they will be any more interesting to young readers than were good Miss Martineau's quiet and thoughtful stories.

Though Mr. William Allingham is only a minor poet, he sometimes manages to be so very lilting and graceful a one that he hath many admirers. These may have some care to know that he has just married in London Miss Helen Paterson, a young lady whose quaint and poetical drawings on wood have gained her a good deal of praise. Speaking of poets, The Athenæum is for once in a way very kind. And this is the measure of its kindness:

> We seldom come across a volume of poetry from America that we are not glad to have read. It may be that only the best specimens find their way to this country; but certain it is that those which do come are rarely if ever marked by the faults, both metrical and grammatical, to say nothing of the utter absence of sense, which we too often have to reprehend in the verses of our compatriots.

It is amiable thus in the course of its criticism of Miss H. R. Hudson's poems, of which it says that they are quite equal to the average.
