LITERARY NOTES.

Among English holiday volumes (Geo. Routledge & Sons) will be a book called "The Sunlight of Song," a collection of sacred or moral songs, with original music by eminent English composers, and with illustrations by noted artists, engraved by the Brothers Dalziel.

Julian Hawthorne begins his promised contributions to Appletons' Journal in this week's issue, with the first of two papers describing his adventures in Saxon Switzerland, under the clever title of "Mountaineering in Miniature." The main series, on "London Suburban Life," will be begun the latter part of the month. Mr. Hawthorne's volume of "Saxon Studies" is nearly ready for publication by James R. Osgood & Co.

The American branch of Geo. Routledge & Sons announces no less than 90 new works and new editions for publication between now and Christmas. They range from magnificently illustrated gift books, at $20 and $25, to the toy-books for which they are noted, and if individual volumes were counted, the list would reach 150 or more. Among the more sumptuous volumes will be "The Sermon on the Mount," in folio, illuminated, and "The Church's Floral Calendar" in like brilliant style.

To the thousand and one editions of Shakespeare, four more new ones are to be added this Autumn by a single house. Geo. Routledge & Sons promise a Boydell Shakespeare, the Clarke text, with 66 reproductions from the Boydell Gallery, by the Woodbury process, in two large 8vo. volumes, at $20; the same text, with 34 photographic illustrations, in one 8vo. volume, at $10; a new edition, edited by Henry Glassford Bell, in six 16mo. volumes; and a red line edition of Knight's text.
