LITERARY NOTES.

J. W. Bouton proposes to publish a number of important books during the Fall, among which will be a translation of Michelet's "Bible of Humanity."

Prof. J. Morgan Hart, now of the University of Cincinnati, has just completed another volume of his series of German Classics. The name of the new volume is "Goethe's Select Prose."

Dr. J. G. Holland's new volume, to be published next week, is called "Everyday Topics; a Book of Briefs," and is made up of careful selections from his papers in Scribner's Monthly in the editorial department of "Topics of the Time." The topics for all times are those which have been selected as material for the book, and they cover a very wide range.

A novel by Philip Gilbert Hamerton is one of the pleasant promises of the Fall. "Wanderholme" is a tale of Lancashire and Yorkshire life in a generation passed, which, though it appeared in London some time since, has hitherto escaped attention here. Mr. Hamerton has pruned it down a good deal from its three volume English form for Roberts Brothers, who announce it for publication in October.

G. P. Putnam's Sons will have ready soon a number of educational books, including what will be known here as Putnam's Series of School Histories. These will comprise "Germany," "Greece," "Rome," and "England," by Leonard Schmitz; "France," by Sutherland Menzies, and "Landmarks of Modern History," by C. S. Dawe. The most important book of the list will be a third volume of Prof. J. M. Hart's excellent "German Classics for American Readers," giving selections from Goethe's prose. Prof. J. J. Elmendorf of Racine College has prepared "Outlines of the History of Philosophy," and the Putnams will undertake the publication of Prof. Day's "Psychology" and "Ethics." To the "Elementary Scientific Series" will be added volumes on "Theoretical Mechanics," "Applied Mechanics," and "Systematic Botany," and to the "Advanced Series," two volumes on "Building Construction."
