LITERARY NOTES.

Prof. W. K. Parker, F. R. S., and Mr. G. T. Bettany, B. A., of Caius College, Cambridge, state the English journals, are preparing a work on the morphology of the skull, in which for the first time will be brought together for comparison descriptions of the remarkable succession of modifications through which the skull passes in development in the principal types of vertebrated animals. The forms illustrated will be the sharks and rays, the salmon, the axolotl, the frog, the snake, the fowl, and the pig. A simple description of each form at successive stages will be followed by a chapter dealing with theoretical questions and summarizing the results of study. The work will be illustrated by a large number of wood-cuts, and will be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co.

A memoir of Dr. S. G. Howe, the Massachusetts philanthropist, has been prepared by his widow, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, and published with a fine heliotype portrait of Dr. Howe. To this is added the tributes paid to his memory by Dr. Bullock, the Rev. C. T. Brooks, F. W. Bird, Dr. O. W. Holmes, and others. This is the book which will be printed at the press of the Perkins Institute at South Boston for the use of the blind. The work in its present form will be sold for the benefit of "The Howe Memorial Printing Fund," from the income of which books may hereafter be printed for the use of the blind; and it will be demanded and valued by many friends of the remarkable man whose memory it will serve to perpetuate.

An important library edition of the works of Burns, in six volumes, demy 8vo, uniform with Mr. Van Laun's translation of Molière, is in press by Mr. Paterson, Edinburgh. The poems and songs will occupy three volumes, arranged chronologically; the letters and other prose productions the remaining three. Each piece will be accompanied by a note, stating what is known of the circumstances under which it was written and of the persons and events to which it refers. The original place of publication and some account of the manuscripts will be given, and the author's variations will be recorded. Prof. Nichol of Glasgow will furnish an essay on the poet's life, character, and influence. Mr. W. Scott Douglas is the editor. The poet's autobiography, contained in his famous letter to Dr. Moore, will in this edition, for the first time, be printed in extenso from the original MS. The Earl of Dalhousie has granted permission for a collation of the poet's correspondence with Mr. George Thomson, parts of which have not yet been published.

A growing interest is shown by American readers in Scandinavian literature, both popular and scholarly. S. C. Griggs & Co. of Chicago are making a specialty of it, and have been sufficiently encouraged by the success of Prof. Anderson's "Norse Mythology" to put in press two editions, containing three separate versions, of Fridthjof's Saga. The first book bears the title of "Viking Tales of the North," and includes prose translations, from the Icelandic, of the sagas of Thorstein, Viking's son, and Fridthjof the Bold, made by Prof. Anderson, who occupies the chair of Scandinavian Literature in the University of Wisconsin, and Jon Bjarnason, with the standard English poetical translation of the latter saga, through Bishop Tegner's Swedish version, by George Stephens. The other is another poetic version of Tegner's "Fridthjof's Saga," made by two Americans, Thos. A. E. and Martha A. L. Holcomb, who for some time dwelt in Sweden as students of its literature, and who have succeeded in preserving the peculiar metrical cadences of Tegner's poem. Tegner, says Longfellow, "stands first among all the poets of Sweden, living and dead;" this saga is his principal work, and "one of the most remarkable poems of the age. This modern scald has written his name in immortal runes. He is the glory and boast of Sweden."

Shakespeare's schooling is now a point of interest to Mr. Furnivall, who has procured from the Rev. Mr. Lupton, the learned master of St. Paul's school, London, a conjectural schedule of what would probably be taught at that time in the grammar school of a small country town like Stratford. Mr. Lupton writes: "I think you would be safe in concluding that at such a school as Stratford, about 1570, there would be taught:

"1. An 'A B C book,' for which a pupil-teacher, or 'A B C-darius,' is sometimes mentioned as having a salary. (I have a transcript of an 'A B C book,' from the Grenville Library, which I suppose to be of the latter part of Henry the VIIIth time).

"2. A Catechism in English and Latin, probably Nowell's.

"3. The authorized Latin Grammar, i. e., Lilly's, put out with a proclamation adapted to each king's reign. (I have editions of 1529, 1532, 1553, 1562, 1573, 1587, 1769, 1721, 1725, 1753, 1758, 1760, 1778, 1784, 1799, &c., and particulars of many others).

"4. Some easy Latin construing book, such as Erasmus's 'Colloquies,' Corderius's 'Colloquies' (you will see an edition of 1568 in the British Museum, marked 12316 e 1—7, or Baptista Mantuanus'"—to which the of studies, suggests Mr. Furnivall, we may add writing, arithmetic, and music.
