LITERARY NOTES.

A curious holiday book is offered by Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati—"Shakespeare's Seven Ages, with photographs from nature."

The autotype fac-simile of the commonplace book of the poet Milton, edited by Mr. A. J. Horwood for the Royal Society of Literature, is just ready in London.

The MS. Remains of John Keble are in an advanced stage of preparation. They will be accompanied by an essay by Dr. Pusey, and an elaborate criticism by Dr. Newman.

The latest Bulletin of the Boston Public Library contains notes on the editions of "Two Noble Kinsmen" and "The Yorkshire Tragedy" among the doubtful Shakespeare plays. In the next issue, the transcript from the Shakespeare part of the British Museum Catalogue, accessible only in MS., will be begun.

H. B. Nims & Co. of Troy are publishing a new edition, with much added matter, in both text and illustrations, of a book once well known, "The Holidays," with thirty illustrations by Darley. The text is by Nathan B. Warren, and covers Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide, and the May-day, Midsummer, and Harvest-home festivals.

A new Natural History under the editorship of Prof. P. Martin Duncan, F. R. S., F. G. S., which has been for some years past in preparation, is now nearly ready for publication, and will be shortly issued in serial form by Messrs. Cassell, Petter & Galpin. The work will embody the latest scientific researches, and will be fully illustrated.

Mr. Ruskin is occupied at Venice in studies for the completion of a supplementary volume to "The Stones of Venice," a work in which he has made considerable progress. Mr. Ruskin is likewise occupied in the preparation of a work which cannot but be highly acceptable to students and visitors in Venice, being a sort of art-guide or art-history of the masterpieces existing in the city.

One of the most striking features of the Christmas St. Nicholas will be the illustrations, by Mr. J. E. Kelley, to Mr. Chas. Barnard's description of "The Horse Hotel," that is to say the stables of the Third Avenue Railroad Company. He has made careful study of the horses from the life, and the engraving, representing several schools, is such as has hitherto been put only upon designs of far different subjects.

A hand-book of classical literature, of new scope, has been prepared by C. A. Wh te, whose textbook on mythology is well known, and will be issued by Henry Holt & Co. in the series with the condensed Taine and Gostwick and Harrison's German literature. It is meant to take wide range, including Sanskrit as well as Greek and Latin, and to take advantage of the recent progress of comparative philology, giving not only biographical and critical notices of leading writers and specimens from their works, but some account of the relations of the languages. The literature of Japan and China will receive similar treatment.

Mr. Alfred Gregory, who is collecting materials for a "Life of Robert Raikes," cofounder with the Rev. Thomas Stock of Sunday schools, is the sub-editor of The Gloucester (Eng.) Journal. As Raikes established The Gloucester Journal in 1722, it is not altogether inappropriate, says The Academy, that an authentic biography of the great philanthropist should a century and a half later emanate from the office of that paper. Mr. Gregory has had very valuable sources of information opened to him, and he will discuss impartially—settling, it is hoped, finally—the long debated question as to the origin of Sunday schools and Mr. Raikes's claim to be considered their founder.

Mr. W. R. S. Ralston, the best English authority on Russia, and the leading writer on the subject, generously writes to the English journals that "the best book ever written about Russia" is now in press. It "is the work of Mr. D. Mackenzie Wallace, a scholar who has spent nearly six years in Russia, studying the various institutions of the land and the most important questions respecting its historical past, social present, and political future, with the most patient and well-directed industry. I will undertake to say, from personal knowledge, both of the writer and of his book, that it will be the most important contribution ever made to the department of Russica in the Imperial Public Library at St. Petersburg—the section, that is to say, devoted to books written by foreigners about Russia. I may even add that it will be accepted by most intelligent Russians as one of the most valuable aids offered of late years to their knowledge of their own country.

The literary event of the centenary, or perhaps Mr. Tupper would say of the century, will come off this week, when Mr. James Miller will publish Mr. Tupper's drama of "Washington" in a little book by no means so weighty as its contents. Mr. Tupper contributes a characteristic prefatory notice. His work, he says, "has been a very rapid labor of love, but still a labor, and no indolent outpouring of extemporary fancies, seeing there will be found due historical authority for most of the incidents, and a fair amount of truthful consistency pervading all the characters; everywhere an intelligent auditor, who is conversant with Washington and his times, will detect touches of quotations from celebrated speeches, and allusions to famous anecdotes. Having all through my life had an honest admiration for the George Washington [in a very early book of mine, 'The Modern Pyramid,' he is one of my 'worthies of mankind'], I rejoice in the chance of making a monogram of his noble life; and my own well known international sentiments now for nearly half a century, dating as they do ancestrally from much older times, will be a good excuse, if such be needed, for producing this play on the Centenary of American Independence."
