THURSDAY, August 9—P. M.

And now the sugar trade takes a hand in showing the beauties and excellence of the "best currency the world ever saw." It seems that easy money has induced certain men and firms to enter upon one of the most gigantic speculations of the age. All the sugars in this and other countries were bought up, and prices were advanced, until the fortunes which were made upon paper seemed princely. But easy money fails to provide a market, even for such a necessary article as sugar. Hence we now have the sequel of an overstocked market, prices drooping and holders fearful of the consequences of attempting to do that which inevitably must be done—to realize. Except for the "blessings" derived from an irredeemable and redundant currency, this speculation never would have been entered into. The stock of sugars in sight did not warrant it, nor did the demand from a people just beginning to feel the pressing need of practicing economy. Yet because money was cheap, certain persons have been induced to involve, not only their own capital, but also that which is borrowed in a speculative attempt to control the price of an article of daily consumption. The new certain results of this speculation furnish an instructive lesson for those who, for no better reasons than those speculators had, are placing fictitious values on stocks—the supply of which is never reduced because of consumption.

On the Stock Exchange, the "European War" and the "great crops" are no more heard of as reasons for a further advance in prices. The "bull" speculators now talk simply of their ability to make such prices as they please to make. To-day their boasted power was more particularly applied to the St. Paul and North-west stocks, which were marked up to about the highest prices yet recorded in the course of this speculative movement. Later, however, the same power was applied to the general list. The coal shares were inclined to weakness, but even these recovered before the end—the greater part of their decline. Western Union to-day was the black sheep of the flock, closing at 72⅞, after having sold at 73¾@74¼@72⅛. The subjoined table shows the

The gold market was dull and featureless. The sales were restricted at 107¼@107⅝; the tone of the speculation was firm. On gold loans the leading rates were 1½ and 2 per cent per annum for borrowing. The Assistant Treasurer paid out $93,000 in coin interest on the public debt, and $172,000 in redemption of called bonds. While temporary accommodation is secured at 1½ on Government bonds, and 2@2½ on mixed collateral, there is no disposition to make time loans except at full rates, as with the usual crop movement toward the seaboard, and the small reserve of the city banks, trouble in the money market is anticipated.
