NOTES ON EDUCATION.

The Rev. J. L. Corning is to give a series of lectures on Art at Vassar.

The English-German Schools in Baltimore have been made entirely free.

Instruction in the metric system is to be given in the first class of the grammar schools of Boston.

The latest statement concerning Iowa's public schools shows the school population of that State to be 496,471; the number enrolled in the schools was 500,381.

Michigan University, at last accounts, had 296 applications for admission. Union College has nearly 70 freshmen; Chicago University, 170; Princeton, 102, and Johns Hopkins University 39.

At the last conferring of degrees in the law department of Berlin University, the German language was used instead of the Latin, and this is to be the custom, hereafter, by order of the Senate.

Mr. James Russell Lowell's advanced courses in Italian and Spanish at Harvard will be taught, during the coming year, by Assistant Professor Nash. Ninety freshmen have entered Harvard this year without conditions.

The Germans, who constitute about one-third of the entire population of Newark, and who contribute their full share of school taxes, have asked that the German language be taught in the public schools.

The Colored State Normal Institute at Fayetteville, N. C., is very successful in itself and very good in its effect upon the colored people of the surrounding country. All the teachers are colored, and teachers and pupils feel great pride in their school.

The leading Italian citizens of San Francisco, promising that there are 6,000 Italian-speaking tax-payers in that city and county, and that many of the youths among them are anxious to learn English idioms, ask for a class in an evening school to be instructed by a teacher speaking Italian.

Paul Trevigne, a colored man, has brought a suit against the New-Orleans School Board, to test the legality of its action in establishing separate schools for the white and black races. The colored people of the city have determined to provide sufficient funds to carry on the suit vigorously.

Mr. Dickinson, Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education, has organized, in that State, a series of county conventions of school committemen. The excellent object of these meetings is the improving and enlightening of these men and the interesting them more thoroughly in the school work of their neighborhoods. It will doubtless be a profitable plan.

It is authoritatively denied that Yale intends to admit applicants, without examination, on certificates of graduation from good training schools. A committee of the faculty, this year, attended the examinations of the Hopkins School, in New-Haven, and advised, after due observation, that some of its graduates be admitted without condition. This was done for the convenience of the faculty, but it is not probable that other schools will be thus favored.

Harvard has 250 freshmen. Dr. Hedge has resigned his position in the faculty, but will still teach German. Professor John McCrady, whom Agassiz chose as his successor, has been elected Professor of Biology in the University of the South. Among the elective studies most popular at Harvard is that of Anatomy. Mr. Winsor, the new Librarian, will, it is reported, plan courses of reading parallel with the lectures and the instruction of the professors. Harvard has now 250,000 volumes in her library and $14,000 is devoted annually to making additions.

Professor Corson, of Cornell, has made an innovation in the usual method of lectures on English literature. He will lecture this term on the writers of the nineteenth century, beginning with Longfellow. Next term he will talk about the eighteenth and part of the seventeenth centuries, and in the Spring he will take up the early English writers. The University has fifty female students this year—seventeen of these being in the freshman class. In the coming Intercollegiate Literary contest, Cornell will be represented by Miss Bruce, '77, in Latin, Miss Thomas, '77, in Greek, and Arthur S. Hathaway, '79, in Mathematics.

Professor Basil Gildersleeve, of Johns Hopkins University, says that the constitution of American colleges is not favorable to the maintenance of enthusiasm. The curriculum is too crowded; the best men are not free to do their best work in their best years, and college and university ought to be more sharply distinguished. Another cause is the lack of free inter-communication among teachers in the same department; yet another—the lack of a suitable apparatus in the way of working books, and the lack of means to buy the best scientific periodicals. Professor Gildersleeve began, Tuesday afternoon, a course of twenty lectures, on the Odyssey.

There are 131 seniors in Yale's academical department, 143 juniors, 135 sophomores and 134 freshmen. The freshman class will possibly have about 170 members when all the conditioned men appear. The Scientific School has 163 students, and there are 58 special and graduate students. The Theological School has 106 students. The following subjects are open to the selection of the seniors for their first compositions: 1. The limits of State interference with the rights of the individual. 2. Carlisle's political philosophy. 3. Ritualism in the English church. 4. Russian life and society as illustrated by Tourguenieff's novels. 5. Eastern travellers in the Middle Ages. 6. The partition of Poland. 7. Influence of Greek poetry on Latin literature. 8. The plan and functions of the Senate in the Government of the United States. 9. Is Walt Whitman a great American poet? 10. Changes wrought in Germany by the conquest of the first Napoleon.

President Gilman says, in regard to the past year's work in Johns Hopkins University, that he is entirely satisfied with its present condition and its outlook. Two new appointments to fellowships have been made during the summer. Mr. F. Franklin, of Baltimore, a graduate of Columbian College, in Washington, who distinguished himself last year as a graduate student in mathematics, and Dr. Schler, of Cleveland, O., whose original work on zoölogy gives promise of marked attainment. There is now one vacancy. The staff at present consists of three Fellows devoted to the study of languages, three in mathematics and engineering, three in chemistry, one in physic, two in philosophy, two in biology and three in history and political science. In addition to the Fellows, there were thirty-four graduate scholars enrolled on the register last year. Fifteen of these were physicians of Baltimore, who were attracted to the biological laboratory by the reputation of Dr. Martin, and by the facilities there provided for working with the best apparatus and instruments. There has been no formal action by the faculty or trustees in regard to the question whether the institution would become an examining as well as a teaching University, and give its diplomas and certificates of proficiency, like the London University, upon the severe tests of an examination; but all opinions expressed are favorable to such a plan. Great diligence, good order, enthusiasm in work at personal sacrifice, and freedom from levity marked the study of the year.
