HOPS—Mr. E. Wells reviews past week as follows: The call for nearly 1,300 bales for export to London this week has given impetus to the trade and caused a much better feeling. Prices remain steady at late quotations, though it is believed that if the present lively export movement continues more money will soon be asked for Choice Hops, which are anything but plenty. Holders of low and medium grades are, we think, will do well to take advantage of the present activity, and not hold for an advance, for the class of goods largely predominate, both here and abroad, and there is little or no chance of doing better by holding. Holders of Choice Export Hops, on the other hand, stand a good show of getting more money than the prevailing currency, and can afford to be a little independent and not force their Hops upon the market now. The scarcity of Fine Hops the world over, is sufficient to insure better prices than now rule.
