

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1886.

J. W. S. REYNOLDS
W. L. McDONALD, Jr. Editors.

The County Executive Committee.

We are authorized by the County Chairman to announce that there will be a meeting of the Democratic County Executive Committee in the Town Hall, Winnsboro, on Saturday the 7th inst., at eleven o'clock a. m. A full attendance is requested.

On the 23rd ult. Mrs. Cleveland became twenty-two years of age. The event was celebrated in a very quiet way at the White House. She may live to enjoy many more similar occasions.

Among the visitors at the Citadel commencement we noticed the name of Gen. R. R. Hemphill, of the Abbeville Medium. Is it possible that he is going to bury the hatchet on the Citadel question?

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has referred the oleomargarine bill, which recently passed both houses of Congress, to Attorney General Garland, in order that he may pass upon its constitutionality. It is possible the veto power may be exercised.

THERE has been much excitement in Texas over the insult offered to Consul Brigham and the imprisonment of Cutting by the Mexican authorities. The Texans are in a warlike spirit, but the difficulty will probably be settled without bloodshed when the two governments shall have entered into negotiations.

With only two dissenting votes the Georgia Democracy on the 28th ult. nominated Gen. John B. Gordon for Governor. The campaign just closed has been one of the liveliest in the history of Georgia politics. South Carolina congratulates Governor Gordon, and extends her best wishes.

THERE is still much talk in the papers as to who burned Columbia. Gen. Sherman admits in his "Memoirs" that he did it and charged it upon Hampton in order to prejudice his people against him. This seems to us to be conclusive enough. If anybody does know Sherman certainly does, and his testimony should settle it. It is seemingly a question, however, that will never cease.

The following paragraph is now going the rounds of the press:

Ex-Governor Moses is reported to be in a falling condition in the Massachusetts penitentiary. He was deemed at the age of thirty to be the most brilliant and promising man in South Carolina, and he is the only instance in American history where an ex-Governor became a common convict.

A leading exchange timely remarks that if justice was meted out there would be many more of the Republican crew in similar institutions.

The Greenville News and Dr. Smith, of Spartanburg, are in sympathy. Smith thinks the South Carolina College ought to have been burnt by Sherman and his fellow-soundrels. The News thinks the College should now be destroyed by hostile legislation, under the pretext of affording better education for the "masses". Happily for the good name of the State, neither Dr. Smith nor the News has much following among her intelligent citizens.

THE appeal for help from the Georgia-town negroes at this season of the year is very unwise. Give them work if this can be done, but let us not feed them in idleness, unless we expect to continue it for nine months. It is to be feared that there will be suffering next winter from the failure of crops in some parts of the State, but this should the more stimulate all to work now while yet it is summer. Many crops can yet be raised—all the fall and winter vegetables for instance. Sweet potato slips can be planted. The turnip season has hardly come. Even corn will make good roasting ears. Doura corn has plenty of time yet to mature. Besides, the low country rivers abound in fish. In fact, few will need any help next winter if every one will do what he can now to provide against suffering.

A CABLEGRAM from London says that the British Cabinet will be made up as follows:

- Secretary for war, Right Hon. Wm. Henry Smith.
- First Lord of the admiralty, Lord George Hamilton.
- Lord high chancellor, Lord Salisbury.
- Secretary for India, Right Hon. Frederick Arthur Stanley.
- Lord president of the Council, Viscount Cranborne.
- President of the local government board, Right Hon. Henry Chaplin.
- President of the board of trade, Right Hon. Edward Stanhope.
- Postmaster-general, John Manners.
- First commissioner of works, Right Hon. David Plunkett.
- Attorney-general, Hon. R. E. Webster.
- Lord chancellor of Ireland, Lord Ashburn.

ONE Dr. R. M. Smith, a candidate for the Senate, in Spartanburg county, is now catching it on all sides, for a speech he recently made before a meeting of farmers. He expressed regret that the South Carolina College was not burnt by Sherman when that officer ordered the destruction of Columbia. This utterance is universally condemned (except, of course, by the Greenville News), and it has led to some inquiry into Smith's record while he was a member of the House in Radical times. It is shown, by the report of the Joint Investigating Committee appointed in 1877, that Smith was corruptible and corrupt.

It is pleasing to note that the press of the State, including some papers opposed to some features in the present conduct of the State College, express disgust at his recent utterances.

Every decent man in the State will rejoice at the defeat which the good people of Spartanburg will surely visit upon this man Smith.

A WASHINGTON correspondent says: Senator Riddleberger continues to make himself very conspicuous in the Senate. I saw him the other day rising nearly every five minutes, interrupting speeches, putting funny points of order, and doing everything in his power to shock the dignity and decorum of the Senate. Riddleberger is a rattle-headed, often incoherent, and makes himself very obnoxious, but he has a strange faculty of nearly always getting on the right side of every question, and while some of his points may be foolish, yet he has uttered a number of very disagreeable truths on the floor of the Senate in regard to its methods of conducting business. His eyes are full and heavy, his nose is large and straight, and his hair is monastic and thick. He has a full breast. He wore a close buttoned-up frock suit, buttoned at its two lower buttons and left open in such a way as to give the appearance of a very expansive chest. A small yellow dagger was in his button-hole. His trousers were gray and striped over very tightly-fitting, highly-polished boots; his voice is rich and deep, while his gestures were extravagant and thoroughly exasperating in their lack of dignity. The Senators, for all the world, looked like a pack of nice, discreet, timid old women, who were obliged to sit in a room and listen to the talk of a very bold, bad, reprobate young woman who had no respect for proprieties. All of the Senators looked as if they were ready to pick up their skirts and run, screaming with protest of propriety, into the modest recesses of the cloak rooms. Riddleberger is ignored by all of the Senators with a grimness of shocked propriety that is very funny. Not one of them will reply to a single point he makes, and it is very rarely that he is noticed by any of them, and then only when he absolutely forces himself upon their attention.

From the above it is readily seen that the days of the Virginia Senator are about run in the United States Senate. Justice, though slow sometimes, comes at last.

The Primary System.

The question of nominating State and Congressional officers by the primary system is just now the subject of considerable discussion throughout our State. The system has been adopted by many of the counties as the fairest and most satisfactory way of nominating county officials, and it is now sought to establish it as the plan for nominating State and Congressional officers. The system has worked most satisfactory in all the counties where it has been adopted, but when it is sought to extend it to all officers we think there are grave questions which present themselves and go far to prove that the plan is not only impracticable, but it defeats the very object which is sought to be obtained. Take, for instance, our own Congressional district, and let us see how the plan would work. At present Fairfield has a representation in the Congressional Convention of eight votes, while Greenville has only ten, or two more votes than Fairfield. Our county polls about sixteen hundred Democratic votes, while Greenville polls, we think it safe to say, four times that many. It takes no examination from this to show that if the primary system should be adopted, Fairfield, which now has nearly the same representation as Greenville, would then only have about one-fourth the representation which she now has as compared with Greenville. The same decrease would follow in a comparison with other stronger counties. We make the supposition that Greenville should present a candidate for Congressional honors and Fairfield one, it will then be readily seen what advantage would be had by Greenville. County pride would come into play, and Fairfield would stand but a poor show. It is useless to say that the Fairfield man could combine any vote of Greenville, for there is a satisfaction in voting for a man from your own county which would be so strong that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the voter would vote for man from his own county. Spartanburg would have the same advantage, and by a combination with Greenville could send the representation they desired on every occasion. We think it will be readily seen that our county would have only one-fourth the representation which she now has if the primary system should be adopted. The same state of affairs would exist in the other weak counties. Besides it would be impracticable. If the majority plan be adopted it would necessitate several elections, and if the plurality plan be adopted it would not be the voice of the people, which is the very object for which the friends of the system are contending.

The same objections present themselves in the nomination of State officers. The upper counties from the lower and weaker counties, and the impracticability would be even greater than in the case of Congressional officers. We think it is a question which should be deliberately considered by our State Convention before a decision is rendered. At our County Convention a resolution was adopted favoring the plan, but we presume our delegates are open to conviction.

In commenting upon the resolution, one of the speakers said that the people should nominate the officers and not a convention of a little more than three hundred voters. By the same argument we hardly think that our eight delegates would be in a position to speak for the sixteen hundred Democratic voters of the county when they were elected by a convention of about one hundred voters. "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

THE BALLOT-BOX.

How Patriotism and Christianity should Have Their Influence on the Voter.

Messrs. Editors: The ballot-box is the only safeguard of our country. And it is a safeguard only when the people put into office those who are worthy and well qualified to honor the office in the administration of its duties. Every other consideration should be subordinate to this. The office should in every case seek the man, and not the man the office. The affairs of our government, in all its departments, are in the hands of those we put into office; and the manner in which its affairs are administered, and its duties performed, depend entirely on the character of its incumbents. It is an honor and a blessing to any country, State or county to put into office sound, safe men; men who can neither be bought nor sold; men who cannot be moved from the principles of justice and equity neither by smiles nor frowns; men of inflexible integrity who have the nerve to dare to do right. Such men are to their constituents what the light house is to mariners tossed upon a dark and stormy sea. And such beacon lights seem to grow brighter as the storm becomes louder and the night darker. Such men are blessings to their age, and will receive the admiration of their countrymen.

But when the elective franchise is perverted for selfish purposes, or in any way abused; when the voters sacrifice their better judgment for sinister ends, or through the candidates of electioneering; or when candidates seek office for purely selfish motives, or employ undue or dishonorable means for securing their election, as seeking by votes with whiskey, &c.; we may naturally expect a train of evils to follow; and in that train of evils we may expect some of all of the following: 1. Men elected (?) who are not the choice of the people. 2. Becoming familiar with a very dangerous precedent. 3. The office and the constituents dishonored by men occasionally too drunk to attend to their duties. 4. The embezzlement of funds occasionally for want of putting safe men in office. 5. Some of our best men, too high-toned to condescend to buy votes with whiskey, left at home; while others are deterred from entering the field dreading to run against the whiskey interest. 6. Whiskey is becoming such a power in many of our elections, that unless the people speak in no uncertain sound through the ballot-box, the day is not far distant when the whiskey interest will control our elections. I shall mention one other evil by no means the least, i. e., the power of example upon our youth. It must be a matter of no ordinary interest to every patriot that the character of our government in the next generation will depend in a large measure upon the character we give to our young men in this. The examples of prominent men, especially when in positions of distinguished honor and trust, have a moulding influence upon our young men. For when the examples of these are pernicious, our youth will become familiar with regarding them as not incompatible with the dignity of distinguished positions. And the higher the office the more dangerous the example. We readily condemn swearing, gambling, drunkenness, &c., in the poor and obscure, but when judges, governors, representatives and senators lie drunk we are inclined to think it less culpable in them. The truth is their example is far more pernicious to the interests of our country than any similar bad example in the poor and obscure.

Now, Messrs. Editors, I write in reference to no pending election, neither am I writing in the interest or against the interest of any man. No such motive. I've written a part of my own views which I penned a few years ago, but was not then published. I think for myself, and no one is responsible for my thoughts but myself. I may say a little more next week directly in regard to the dictates of Patriotism and Christianity at the polls.

B. F. CORLEY.

A shocking accident occurred near Columbia this morning, whereby one brother lost his life at the hands of another. Two young sons of Dr. B. W. Taylor had gone to the plantation of their uncle, Col. Thos. Taylor, to shoot doves. The elder, Ben, was fourteen years old, and the younger, Nat, about twelve. While attempting to shoot a bird Ben killed his brother. The sorrowful story was told to the coroner's jury this evening by Col. Taylor. He said that he had taken the two boys to his plantation to shoot and had left them together in a field. About twenty minutes afterwards a ploughman told him that Ben had shot Nat. He met Ben coming toward him to tell him that he had accidentally shot his brother. Proceeding to the spot where the shooting occurred, Col. Taylor was satisfied, from the position of the dead boy and of the two guns, and from Ben's statements, that the two had been very close together in the grass and weeds five feet high, that a dove flew up in front of Ben and circled to his left, and as he wheeled and fired at it, Nat rose was struck in the head by the fall load, his wound causing instant death. There was no eye witness except Ben, and he was so unnerred by the accident that the jury decided not to examine him, and upon Col. Taylor's statement found a verdict of accidental killing at the hands of Benjamin Franklin Taylor. The news made a deep impression in Columbia and there is great sympathy for Dr. Taylor and his family.—News and Courier, July 27.
