PACIFIC MAIL STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

ANNUAL REPORT TO THE STOCKHOLDERS.

The directors of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company have issued to the stockholders a report of the company's business for the year ended April 30, 1879. The president of the company in his remarks refers at length to a circular issued last December, which was principally composed of strictures upon former managements. He also refers to the loss of the steamer Georgia, and to the damage sustained by the steamer Alaska in a hurricane last March as the only instances of loss or damage during the year, "while much money has been expended in repairs and improvements," and the company's steamers "are now in better condition than at the commencement of the year." As with all recent annual reports of this company, the indebtedness is shown to have been reduced ($498,375), but a notable feature of the present statement that distinguishes it from other recent annual reports of the company is a statement of the company's gross earnings and operating expenses for the year. The president says:

"In addition to the available assets as stated by the treasurer, the following are outstanding, a part of which, at least, are believed to be collectable, viz.: Claim against Panama Transit Steamship Company for amount overdrawn (to recover which suit has been commenced), say, $200,000; claim against the United States Government under contract for carrying the mails, 1873 and 1874, $583,333 33. This claim has been decided by the Court of Claims in favor of this company for $41,666 67, which is the amount earned, under the contract in question, on one voyage between San Francisco, Japan and China and return. As this decision establishes the principle upon which the claim was made, it was deemed a suitable case to appeal to the Supreme Court, and this has been done."

The claim against the Panama Company is the one that the Pacific Mail Company by its committee agreed to relinquish in consideration of the modified traffic contract that was agreed to about one month ago, but which President Babcock refused to sign in behalf of the Pacific Mail Company. The business of the year is given as follows:

	Gross earnings.	Operating expenses.	Net earnings.
