HORSE MARKET.

No shipments to foreign ports during the week. A lot of 8 Norman stallions arrived from France for Messrs. Degen Bros., of Ottawa, Ill. They were large, muscular horses, of 1,600 to 1,800 lb weight, all three- and four-year olds, and cannot fail to please Western breeders. Mr. J. Degen came on to meet the stallions and, in an interview with the reporter, gave many interesting facts in regard to the breeding business in that part of Illinois. He says that all the large horses have been picked up by Eastern buyers and that it will be many years before farmers have a surplus which they cannot sell readily for "big prices." A short time before leaving home he sold two car-loads of three-year old work-horses to a New-York buyer for $240 per head. These horses were taken to Ohio, where they will be broken to work and in six months will be ready for this market. This confirms what we have repeatedly said that large work horses of a suitable age for use, and time driving animals are very scarce, and the farmers who take advantage of these facts first will find it the most profitable enterprise they ever engaged in. The city trade in horses remains about the same; possibly a trifle more business was done late in the week. Dealers think another week will show some improvement, as buyers have begun to look around.
