Instruction.

For Boys and Young Men—City.

ANYBODY who wants a good, thorough, sensible education that will fit him for business and make a man of him, need not go out of the City of New-York to get it. In fact, going out of New-York would be about the worst thing he could do. He would be going right away from the very fountain-head of such instruction, PACKARD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE. There never was so good a time to attend to this matter of a business education as now. Never a time when educated men and women were in greater demand. And when we say "educated," we mean prepared by some sort of culture to do something. There are lots of so-called educated people in the world who can't do much that anybody wants done. Horace Greeley once said that there were over 2,000 college graduates in New-York who didn't know enough to earn a living. That couldn't be said of any two thousand, or two hundred, or even two of the graduates of PACKARD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE. A man or boy who didn't know enough to earn a living couldn't graduate at Packard's. If there are any Packard graduates floating about in this town without visible means of support, Barnum would be glad to get hold of them. They would be real curiosities. No, there are none. The Packard graduates are all in business, and hundreds more are wanted. Business men are waiting for them. The best positions are within their reach.

If you want to know what a real live school is like, drop into Packard's College to-morrow morning at half past nine. Take the elevator in Metropolitan store. Remember the number, 805 Broadway.
