The call-loan market at the Stock Exchange has steadily gravitated toward ease. From 20 per cent as an exceptional rate on Monday, the rates declined to 7@8. Yesterday 6 per cent was the common rate, both on ordinary stock collaterals and Government bonds, although late transactions were made as low as 3½ per cent. There has been little change, however, in the markets for commercial paper, but the best names move a little more freely at 7@8 per cent than they did a week ago. The Sub-Treasury receipts for the week ended Friday included $1,170,000 coin for silver certificates to be issued at other points, and $3,500,000 gold in exchange for its certificates to repay in gold, so that although it seems to have lost $642,612 during the week, the Treasury really gave to this market $5,323,608 in money in excess of the receipts here; that principally was because of payments for October interest, and in redemption of bonds of the 116th and 117th calls. The payments for interest are practically completed, but the redemption of bonds will continue, but probably in a retail way; the redemptions for the week ended yesterday amounted to $2,496,150, making a total to date of $6,539,530, and leaving about $22,000,000 of the 116th and 117th calls yet to be presented, besides about $10,000,000 of previous calls. The outgo of money to the interior last week was not large, the shipments in excess of receipts exclusive of that sent through the Treasury's Exchange Bureau, hardly exceeding $1,000,000; but the exchanges are all heavily against this city, and the demand for money at the South and West is active. The new interest law keeps balances here for loans at the Stock Exchange that otherwise would be withdrawn for use at home. Under a small mercantile demand, the foreign exchanges ruled weak, but the bankers were large buyers of cotton bills drawn against future shipments. At the end of the week, the easier money gave a better tone to the market, and rates closed about ½ cent to the £ higher than they were earlier in the week.

Last week witnessed no improvement on the commercial situation, which as the season advances is disappointing reasonable anticipations. Despite the fact that the weakness of the foreign exchanges checked exports, speculators advanced the prices of all grains because of a large decline in the receipts at the Western ports. As the European prices did not respond, the export movement came to a dead halt. The receipts of wheat and corn at Chicago last week were each 600,000 bushels less than for the preceding week. The export of cotton from all the ports reached the respectable total of 80,608 bales, against 80,757 bales for the same week of 1881, making the total since September 1, 198,934 bales, against 274,675 for same time of 1881; but in valuing the movement as a liquidation of an indebtedness, it should be borne in mind that we receive nearly 1 cent a pound less for cotton this year than we received last year, making the value of the exports last week nearly $650,000 less than what the same quantity realized last year. Notwithstanding a considerable bolstering, the condition of the iron and coal trades is not satisfactory; asking prices are not quoted firm, but the principal business doing is in old orders. Of the anthracite coal market, The Engineering and Mining Journal reports as follows:

The trade is dragging along quietly, and so far as new business is concerned, is dull and listless. The quantity of coal moving is heavy, but the great bulk of it is on old orders at low prices. Soon prospends to be selling coal at October circular prices, and it is a difficult matter to get at any basis as to the real basis of present transactions. It seems that everybody is shifting for himself and is indifferent as to what his neighbors are doing. The demand is light; but on the other hand, the deliveries are not heavy. There is some curiosity in the trade as to the true motive that has impelled the anthracite companies to take the course which they have pursued during the last few months. Whatever may be claimed to the contrary, the state of trade has not warranted it, and the true inwardness of the movement remains a puzzle over which many delight to ponder.

While the speculative markets at the Stock Exchange last week were unusually active and interesting, Government bonds were dull and with only small changes in the quotations. The new 3 per cents have not yet appeared in the market and therefore are not quoted. The final changes in the bids are ⅛ per cent advance for the 4s and ⅛ per cent decline for the 3½s. Business in State bonds was small and the only feature was the weakness shown by the Tennessee issues. Of the share speculation there is little to be added to the daily reports and comments already printed. The transactions aggregated 2,635,459 shares, against $2,409,423 shares for the preceding week, and 1,872,800 shares for the week before may have been the means of developing the weak spots in the situation, but when the liquidation was fairly started the easing of money was without effect in checking the movement, nor was it confined to the few stocks which were directly implicated in the developments. Louisville and Nashville, Denver and Rio Grande, Union Pacific, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, attracted the most attention, and those four stocks contributed 1,300,000 shares to the week's total trading, but the activity and depression all over the market was only less conspicuous than with the stocks named. The Richmond and Danville system's stocks, however, made the greatest declines, but with small transactions. The continued buying to cover "shorts" caused several sharp reactions, and in more than one instance prevented a stampede to sell, which might have precipitated a panic—an event which the most vexatious of "bears" dreads only less than a "bull." So far as the actions of the large operators are concerned, they yet have shown no disposition to stem the decline, except in so far as it is necessary to make it steady and slow. The week closed with an uneasy feeling prevailing, but with the opinions of the general traders very evenly divided whether this week would see much lower prices or not.
