NOTES ON EDUCATION.

Mr. A. B. Miller, of Warren, Penn., a well-known educator, gives teachers some pertinent and useful advice in an article on teaching recently written by him. He does not believe in teaching ornamental branches before the useful. The ability to solve an ordinary arithmetical problem, to write a correctly worded and phrased letter, to read and understand the English language as currently used—these must always be the main features in the education of the people.

The Schoolmasters' Club, of Boston, met last week to partake of its second annual dinner. The president, Mr. L. H. Buckingham, of the English High School, said that he did not like the term "teacher" so well as "schoolmaster." Colonel Higginson thought that the teachers of to-day had grown out inferior and incompetent men. Addressing the teachers, he said: "Go on in your duty. Raise the characters of the schools in Massachusetts, and do not fear for one instant that the Legislature or the people of Massachusetts shall be false with you or interfere with your work." Other speakers sharply criticised the portion of Governor Butler's message relating to the public schools.

The Chicago Free Kindergarten Association is a novel institution recently set in operation, with the hope of gathering the children of the poor from the tenements, alleys and saloons, and giving them good air and some little instruction under kind and competent teachers for three hours a day. Eight gartens are now maintained, with a roll of 1,114 children, and sixty teachers are employed. The ladies who are carrying on this work aim to extend it in other cities.

A writer in The Galveston News, speaking of the proposed State University, expresses the hope that the study of art will find a place in its curriculum. With a largeness of view only equalled by the largeness of his State, he utters a glowing prophecy concerning the future art possibilities in the Lone Star State. All of which may be true; but the present need of Texas and all other new States is that they give to all their citizens an opportunity to acquire a good common school education. High Art will come in its own good time.

The State Normal School at St. Cloud, Minn., is so crowded that many applicants are turned away. The present buildings are reported to be "old, cold, dangerous and crowded."

The Oregonian thinks that the College of Oregon will compare favorably in most respects with those in the Eastern States. "While the Greek text of Thucydides," it says, "and the Principia of Newton may possibly be taught in Eastern colleges with more appearance of thoroughness than in our own, yet we get as much here as any student requires for his introduction, which is all that any college course can actually supply. If more is to be had it must be through special study outside of any regular course; and not one in a hundred requires it. Education at home is more likely to be regarded as a means than as an end; while in the case of education abroad this condition is very likely to be reversed. A young person sent abroad for his education is apt to return with an idea that he brings some thing home with him which is very much wanted for the enlightenment of the country, when in fact the chances are that he himself lacks just those things which are requisite for his usefulness and success."

The reasons given by the trustees of Johns Hopkins University for not building at Clifton, a suburb of Baltimore, as the founder was thought to have directed, are as follows: The site at Clifton is declared to be unhealthy. To put the university in such a place would absolutely ruin it. Besides, they say, Mr. Hopkins did not recommend a site, but left the choice to the discretion of the trustees. They say, therefore, in conclusion, that "their trusts have been executed with a thorough understanding of their legal and personal obligations, and with the single desire to promote the great objects which Johns Hopkins had in view."

At a meeting of the Philadelphia Board of Education the other night, a communication from a clergyman was read calling for the introduction in public schools of non-sectarian Christian textbooks, and offering to prepare such a system of text-books himself. Just how a text-book on arithmetic, for instance, could be made Christian is not very clear.

The biennial report of the condition of the public schools of California, just issued, is not in all respects satisfactory. Many of the children of school age in that State must be growing up in illiteracy.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 14—P. M.

The stock market to-day developed little more than a trading back and forth between Board-room operators. Better prices ruled during the first hour of business. After the first hour prices again were drooping for stocks which were active, and stationary for those which were dull. The total transactions for the day amounted only to 282,859 shares, against 370,600 shares yesterday. Central Pacific stock is worthy of special mention, because with an unusual amount of transactions its price declined to 79½; it later recovered to 80⅜. The coal stocks continued to be special features of the market and were weak. Before noon advices from Philadelphia announced that the Reading Company had been discharged from the control of the receiver's hands; after that its price declined from 54¼ to 53¾, and recovered to 54. The Illinois Central Company has declared a dividend of 17 per cent on its capital stock, payable in its 4 per cent leased line stock, which is a conversion of the Chicago, St. Louis and New-Orleans stock. The Illinois Central Company held $6,670,000 of the Chicago, St. Louis and New-Orleans stock; to pay 17 per cent on its own stock requires $4,930,000, so that it still holds, if it has not sold it, $1,640,000 of its leased line four per cent certificates. Of course the distribution of the company's assets, upon which it guarantees the interest or dividends, converts a possible source of revenue into a permanent fixed charge against it, which takes precedence of dividends upon its own stock. In expectation of the division, however, the stock of Illinois Central today was exceptionally strong at 143¾@145@144⅞. The last twenty minutes of business were devoted to the usual marking-up process, and to a liberal covering of "shorts" which had been put out earlier in the day; and hence there was a good rally in prices, which, however, generally are lower than yesterday's closing figures.

Governments were inactive at the Stock Exchange and the business done at the offices of the large dealers was only moderate in amount. Bids for the 4½s are ¼ higher than yesterday. Annexed are the closing quotations:
