NOTES ON EDUCATION.

The State of Alabama now supports four normal schools, three of which are for colored people; and of these three, two have colored principals. In Montgomery the public schools have been thoroughly reorganized during the past year. The recent convention of colored teachers held in that city was very successful.

One of the features of Wellesley College is the attention paid to the physical culture of the young women who are pupils. A fully equipped gymnasium is provided, and under the direction of a competent instructor the pupils are taught the exercises common to gymnasiums.

The eccentric old Canadian, Arunah Huntington, who left $200,000 to be divided among the public schools of Vermont has done something which will be of little practical value to the schools. Each district will be entitled to the insignificant sum of $10, which will not advance much the cause of education.

A bill has been introduced in the Illinois Legislature which, if it becomes law, will enable the Board of Education of Chicago to condemn property for school sites solely at its discretion. This measure is strongly opposed as unjust and unnecessary. The Chicago Tribune says: "The power of condemnation is a dangerous one, and should not be resorted to except as a matter of necessity; and, as there is no trouble in getting all the school sites that are needed, the Legislature will do well to leave this bill unacted on for a few years to come."

The first official act of Superintendent MacAllister, of Philadelphia, was to inspect the Girls' Normal School, with which he expressed great satisfaction.

The City of Buffalo has been using the same textbooks in its schools for the past twenty years; but now there is a movement on foot to make an entire change. It would seem to be high time. To teach geography, for instance, out of books published twenty years ago, is a little worse than not to teach it at all. To change text-books too often is a serious evil, but not to change them at all is intellectual death.

At the annual meeting of the Tri-State Teachers' Association of Ohio, held a few days ago at Toledo, Superintendent Ellis, of Sandusky, took strong ground against introducing industrial education in the public schools. He believes that the evils prevalent in society attributed by some to the public schools, are due to other sources, notably to the greed for gain. What is needed for workingmen in all departments of labor, he says, is the kind of training given by the public schools. Industry is cultivated in the schools, and the same quality that sends a boy to the head of his class will push him to the front in whatever business or work he may engage in when he leaves school. A teacher has no more right to train the son of a mechanic to the business of his father than the son of a doctor, a lawyer or a preacher to the profession of his father. The object-lesson craze and the natural-science craze in the public schools exhausted themselves without any serious detriment to the schools or any increased expenditure of public money, but if there is to be an annex of industrial training it will involve a large expenditure of money in addition to what some people now consider the highest limit for educational purposes.

Mr. John D. Philbrick, in noticing a recent statement of the Paris correspondent of The Boston Journal about the schools of France, says: "Instead of suppressing the schoolmaster, the Republican power in France is doing its utmost to make his status as desirable as possible by offering for his encouragement in the first place, gratuitous training of the first order, and then honors and awards for faithful and efficient service; even the door of the National Council of Education has been opened to him. In the original plan of the present school system of France, which was adopted fifty years ago, under the lead of Cousin and Guizot, it was intended there should be two normal schools, one for either sex, in each of the eighty-seven departments. And previous to 1870 there had been established normal schools for the education of the school-masters in seventy-four departments, while in only nine of the departments normal schools for the training of school-mistresses had been opened. The Republicans have resolved to carry out the original plan of Cousin and Guizot, and place the sexes on an equal footing in respect to normal schools, and hence the rapid increase of the number of female normal schools within the last few years."

There are 343,896 children of school age in the State of New-Jersey.

MAY MAGAZINES.

The Manhattan for May challenges in its fresh garb the attention belonging to an entirely new publication. It has in reality suffered a sea-change and ruffles it forth bravely with a goodly list of writers, including many well-known names. The conductors of the magazine are understood to aim at a high place for it among periodicals of serious value, and if their intentions are fulfilled The Manhattan ought to become a well-beloved title to readers of current literature. The new number opens with a careful and thoughtful study of "Hamlet" by Mr. Henry C. Pedder. Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford has a characteristic story with the tragedy of inconstancy; and Mr. Julian Hawthorne contributes an analytic sketch in which is cleverly portrayed the masculine selfishness which will when it may not and will not when it may. There is a third story—by Miss Edna Dean Proctor—and there are, moreover, pleasant papers on Brittany, on Central American politeness, on Cookery, and on a Brazilian romance. Divers poems and a literary and a miscellaneous department complete the table of contents. The young magazine deserves a cordial welcome, as much for its theories and intentions as for the matter it offers.

The current number of Longman's Magazine is eminently readable if not remarkable. Its most engaging portion is that in which are offered the concluding chapters of Mr. Stevenson's delightful story, "The Treasure of Franchard." Mr. Payn's novel maintains its interest. A paper on Dickens as a theatrical critic points out anew the novelist's passion for melodrama.

The last monthly part of The Continent has lost nothing in its text while it has gained much in illustration. The articles on Munkacsy and on the Girardins are excellent in both particulars. The magazine is in fact so good that the reader cannot but regret that it should be made to wrestle with the difficulties of weekly publication. Judge Tourgee's story grows more exciting as it approaches its conclusion, and Miss Broughton's "Belinda" has doubtless a vogue among young lady readers. The minor departments of the magazine are of uniform excellence.

NEW-YORK MILITARY ACADEMY.

FORT WASHINGTON, N. Y.
Established 1854.
Superintendent—JOHN N. HAYS, M. D.
RECOPENS SEPT. 4, 1882.

A Boarding School of the highest grade, whose three-fold end, and scrupulously followed, is to mould, at an early age, the intellect of youth by science, the will by obedience, and the feelings by religion; never separating these three great requisites, instruction, discipline, religion, while fitting for every profession.

Situated on Washington Heights, about ten miles up the Hudson. It is reached by the Sixth Avenue Elevated Road to 155th-st. Carriages are always in waiting, or, by timely notification, the superintendent meets the arrival of any train.

A more beautiful and healthy place—on an eminence commanding the most delightful scenery—or more attractive surroundings, are not to be met along the fair land banks of the Hudson. Its buildings are unusually homelike.

There are forty acres of land attached to it, shaded and intersected by oak groves, affording ample space for playgrounds.

French, German, and Spanish spoken.
