THE COURTS.

MR. MURPHY'S SUIT AGAINST MR. ENGLISH.

There has been an entry of satisfaction in the case of William D. Murphy, a Democratic "statesman" of Albany, against William E. English, of Indiana, candidate for Vice-President of the Democratic party in the last National election. Mr. Murphy began a suit in the Supreme Court in January last year to recover $1,180 for services rendered in the way of speeches in Indiana from September 4 to October 12, 1880, and expenses incurred while travelling in that State. In his petition he estimated the value of twenty-five speeches at $1,000 and stated his expenses at $280. He received $100 on account and sued for the balance, alleging that he had been hired by Mr. English to deliver the speeches. Mr. English in his answer denied the indebtedness, denied that he had hired Mr. Murphy, asserted that the speeches were poor and worth no compensation whatever, and that the contract (if contract there was) was against public policy. Mr. Murphy's counsel demurred to the latter plea and Judge Larremore sustained the demurrer on the ground that the question turned on the statutes of Indiana which did not forbid such contracts. The case was appealed, but pending argument has been settled for about $400, for which Algernon S. Sullivan has given his check to T. C. Ecclesine, of counsel for Mr. Murphy.

PRIVATE MAIL-CARRYING UNLAWFUL.

Judge Wallace, of the United States Circuit Court, yesterday handed down an opinion denying the motion for an injunction to restrain Postmaster-General Gresham, Postmaster Pearson and others from interfering with the business of Mrs. Mary Blackham, carried on under the name of Boyd's City Dispatch. The Post Office Inspectors recently seized a large amount of mail matter given to the dispatch company for delivery. The motion for an injunction was made on the ground that the routes on which the company carried letters were not post routes, and that the seizure of the letters was unconstitutional. The Judge decides that the streets of the city are clearly post routes, under acts of Congress authorizing the Postmaster-General to establish post routes in cities. He decides that the seizure was constitutional, and says that the Courts have gone far toward establishing the doctrine that in matters of revenue any regulations in relation to seizure that Congress has seen fit to make must be supported.

CIVIL NOTES.

Justice Barrett yesterday in the Supreme Court dissolved the temporary injunction recently obtained by Arthur J. Delaney restraining the trustees of St. Patrick's Cathedral from removing the bodies now buried in the Eleventh Street Cemetery.

Justice Lawrence yesterday in the Supreme Court made a memorandum in regard to the application of the Manhattan Railway Company for leave to pay into court the moneys due the Metropolitan Elevated Railway Company for rent, to the effect that he had practically made up his mind, but would hear further argument from counsel if they desired.

In the Supreme Court, Chambers, Justice Barrett yesterday appointed Daniel Van Winkle receiver of the property which is now and for several years has been the subject of litigation between Cornelius Brinkerhoff and Sarah S. Perry, who was formerly his wife, but who has obtained a divorce from him and resumed her maiden name. The property once belonged to Mr. Brinkerhoff, and was deeded by him to his wife when, as he asserts, he was drunk and did not know what he was doing.

Justice Donohue in the Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday directed a resale of the mines in the Grand View Mining District, Colorado, of the Great Boulder Consolidated Gold and Silver Mining Company of Colorado. The property was sold in 1881 in a foreclosure suit brought by the trustees of the mortgage at the request of George W. Ballou and Edwin Lord, who held the largest part of the bonds secured by the mortgage. The property was bought in by the trustees for $60,000 for the benefit of the bondholders, but as these could not agree upon the disposition of the mines an application was made for a second sale.

MR. MERRICK DENOUNCES BRADY.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—In the Star Route trial to-day Mr. Merrick continued his address for the prosecution. If there was an scheme for defrauding the Treasury in connection with these routes that genius or rascality could conceive that had not been practised he said, he had been unable to learn of it. He was amazed at their fecundity in schemes of that kind. All is changed now; no more robberies in the self-sustaining Post Office Department; no more deficiencies. The people are satisfied, and the mail is carried with the regularity of the sun's course. Mr. Merrick fiercely denounced Brady, saying that he had had the audacity to threaten to destroy the Star Route service if his demand for a deficiency appropriation of $2,000,000 was not granted.

When his letter—that extraordinary piece of dynamite—exploded in the House of Representatives, fifty men sprang at once to their feet and demanded an investigation. The committee was appointed; Blackburn was the chairman; but it was impossible to get at the facts. They just scratched the surface, for these officials were so slippery that it needed a well-handed hand to hold them. But they got at enough to learn that the whole atmosphere of the Post Office Department under Brady was impregnated with crime. Brady caught Congress in a tight place, some members had spent money to save the service. But they resolved to stop the wildest flings of his wild dance of extravagance. They told him that they knew of the fraud; and ordered him to make no more expedition that year. Newspapers had been bought by Brady to help him in the perpetration of his frauds upon the Treasury and to abuse the men who sought to expose him. Brady got the lion's share; and it was right, for he did the lion's work, he was the lion.

MR. STOKES'S MENTAL SOUNDNESS.

Another hearing was had yesterday, before Surrogate Rollins, in the contest over the codicil to the will of the late James Stokes. The first witness examined was Dr. William A. Watson, of this city. He said he had been a Navy surgeon during the Rebellion. He had never spoken to Mr. Stokes, but had frequently seen him in the street in this city and in Newport. He had frequently seen Mr. Stokes speak to children in Madison Square. Mr. Stokes seemed to the witness to be an intelligent observer of things. He was generally alone. He seemed an erect and vigorous man for his years. The witness never observed anything which led him to suppose that Mr. Stokes had any physical disease. He never saw anything in Mr. Stokes denoting irrationality.

Albert Harnickell, a copper broker, said he had known Mr. Stokes for several years. He had several times walked down town with him. Mr. Stokes was not a talkative man. In 1880 he had an extended conversation with Mr. Stokes, with a view to getting two drafts discounted. The drafts were secured by liens on certain copper mines in Colorado. Mr. Stokes asked many questions in regard to the mines and the condition of Colorado. The witness succeeded in getting the drafts discounted. He saw Mr. Stokes for the last time in the spring of 1881. He spoke to him about the disturbance in the market in Wall-st., and asked his opinion in regard to the probability of a crash in the copper trade. Mr. Stokes said he thought it was only a Wall-st. flurry. This afterwards proved to be the case, although the witness did not think so at the time. Mr. Stokes told the witness that he ought to dress more warmly and that it would be better if all young men and women would abandon their foolish fashion of dressing and wear warmer clothing. Mr. Stokes seemed to the witness to be a "perpendicular" man. He always dressed well enough. In his later years his shoes seemed to have grown larger. His trousers, also, did not set very well, and he evidently had a "villanous" tailor. The witness thought that a tailor who made such fitting trousers must have known that he was cheating his customer.

L. E. Schatz, an attorney, said he had had several conversations, in the spring of 1881, with Mr. Stokes in regard to certain real-estate transactions. He never saw anything in Mr. Stokes to indicate irrationality.

The hearing will be continued to-day.

WHY NO INDICTMENT WAS FOUND.

BREWSTER AND COMPANY'S STRANGE STORY ABOUT A WAGON, AN ASSISTANT DISTRICT-ATTORNEY AND A GRAND JURY.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: In May, 1882, Dr. W. G. Buddington, of No. 416 Vanderbilt-ave., Brooklyn, purchased of T. W. Quimby, of No. 70 Rutledge-st., same city, a wagon bearing our name-plate and trade-mark, which Mr. Quimby had advertised in a newspaper for sale as a vehicle of our manufacture. Soon after the purchase Dr. Buddington discovered that he had been deceived, that the wagon was not made by us, and that Quimby's representations were entirely false; and after a good deal of trouble he obliged Quimby to return the money that he had obtained from him by false pretences.

The counterfeiting of trade-marks being a felony, and having previously suffered by similar acts in this city and elsewhere, we procured a warrant for Quimby's arrest. On June 9 Quimby appeared before Justice Walsh, waived examination, and gave bonds to appear when called upon. Pending the action of the Grand Jury in the matter the Assistant District-Attorney, Mr. Backus, in charge of the case, informed our counsel whom we had employed to press the charge that while Quimby was probably guilty, he was his friend and was also the friend of the District-Attorney, he hoped the matter would be privately settled, and would be glad to meet a member of our firm and arrange for a settlement. Of course we did not respond to this invitation, and it is hardly necessary to add that with such powerful friends at court no indictment was found against Quimby by the Grand Jury before which we produced ample proofs of the guilt of the man.

After this failure a member of our firm called upon Mr. Backus and stated that we had discovered still stronger evidence of Quimby's guilt and desired to appear before another Grand Jury to press the charge. This, Mr. Backus said, he had no power to do; that a second appearance before a Grand Jury could only be authorized by an order from the proper court, and recommended that we apply through our counsel for this privilege. With our former experience of the influence which controlled Grand Juries we decided to waste no more time or money in the prosecution of a case in which the defendant could command influences not available to the ordinary citizen.

We submit this case to the public through your columns in order to show that in future cases of violation of law in Brooklyn the sufferer will do well, if, before arresting the culprit, he learns whether he is a friend of the District-Attorney or his assistant; if this happens to be the case, then he will save time and money by pocketing his original loss.
