NEW PUBLICATIONS.

ANEW RELIGIOUS ENCYCLOPÆDIA; or, Dictionary of Biblical, Historical, Doctrinal and Practical Theology, Based on the Real-Encyklopadie of Herzog, Plitt and Hauck. Edited by PHILIP SCHAFF, D. D. Vol. II.—GABBATHA—OZANAM. Quarto, pp. xvii., 666. New-York: Funk & Wagnalls.

The second volume of this useful work fully sustains the reputation of the first, which was noticed in THE TRIBUNE at the time of its issue. It would be unreasonable to expect that in the treatment of so many diverse subjects by so many authors, there should be a uniform standard of excellence. Many of the topics necessarily included in such a work are of minor importance, others are of interest only to a small class of persons. But on the whole the student and even the general reader will find this encyclopædia both interesting and profitable. It will hardly, perhaps, be accepted as a standard authority in the world of scholarship. But it does not pretend to be such an authority. Though embodying some of the most approved results of modern scholarship, it is not prepared for scholars, but for the general reader. It does not, therefore, institute any original researches in controverted points of doctrine. An inquiry suitable for the scholar would only confuse and perplex the ordinary reader.

It is perhaps unnecessary to say anything to introduce Dr. Hugh Macmillan to American readers. The charm and versatility of his style are known to many cultivated people. "The Marriage of Cana in Galilee," the latest volume from his pen, is distinguished by most of his peculiarities. It shows the same microscopic attention to details, the same wealth of imagery, and the same skill in deducing useful lessons that have distinguished the author of "Bible Teachings in Nature." This little book consists of nine chapters, each of which has for its subject some incident connected with the story of the marriage in Cana. There would not seem to be much in this miracle of an ethical nature, but Dr. Macmillan's fertile brain finds a great deal that is suggestive and interesting. Nevertheless we doubt the expediency of devoting a whole volume to such a slight episode. Life is too short for the ordinary reader to spare time for books like this, and monographs, however brilliant, on a detached saying or parable from the Bible are not likely to be widely read in this busy, workaday world.

"A Midsummer Lark" (Henry Holt & Co.), by W. A. Croffut, is a sportive and ingenious description of a tour in Europe. Though printed after the manner of prose, it is rhymed throughout with never-failing melodious agility. "This splash of paint," says the author in his preface, "may pass for an 'Impression,' like those before whose cloudy vistas linger ecstatic gazers at the Exhibition—done with a very sudden thumb and finger; one of the sort of vague and shadowy guesses into whose fabric Fancy's frolics enter suggesting vastly more than it expresses." Over Great Britain, Germany and Switzerland Mr. Croffut takes his rhyming flight.

In the "Life of Gilbert Haven" (Phillips & Hunt), by George Prentice, the admirers of the late bishop will find an appreciative sketch of his life and career. The fact that it is written by a friend and co-religionist renders it practically valueless as an impartial biography; but as a series of racy anecdotes of a man who in his lifetime was thought to possess many of the elements of greatness, it will be somewhat interesting to the general public.

The last half-yearly volume of The Century is even richer than the previous ones in matter of permanent interest and literary value. The historical papers of Dr. Eggleston and Mr. Cable, Mr. Stedman's "Emerson," Mr. James's "Venice," and Mr. Warner's "England" are notable items of the list. To look through this opulent volume is to realize anew with what excellent judgment, balance and liberality the magazine is edited.

NEW-YORK MILITARY ACADEMY.
FORT WASHINGTON, N. Y.
Established 1854.
Superintendent—JOHN S. HAYS, M. D.
REOPENS SEPT. 4, 1882.
A Boarding School of the highest grade, whose three-fold end, and scrupulously followed, is to mould, at an early age, the finest of youth by science, th ui will by obedience, and the feelings by religion; never separating these three great requisites, instruction, discipline, religion, while fitting for every profession.
Situated on Washington Heights, about ten miles up the Hudson, it is reached by the Sixth Avenue Elevated Road to 155th-st. Carriages are always in waiting, or, by timely notification, the superintendent meets the arrival of any train.
A more beautiful and healthy place—on an eminence commanding the most delightful scenery—or more attractive buildings, are not found along the banks of the beautiful Hudson. Its buildings are unusually homelike.
There are forty acres of land attached to it, shaded and intersected by oak groves, affording ample space for playgrounds.
French, German, and Spanish spoken.
