LITERARY NOTES.

"A picturesque book on Cape Cod is promised by Estes & Lauriat.

"J. S. of Dale," the author of "Guerndale," is now positively said to be Mr. Frederick J. Stimson, of Boston, a Harvard graduate of the class of '76, a lawyer and a contributor to various journals.

General Bradley T. Johnson has written a book on the foundation of Maryland in which he expresses the conviction that Cecil Calvert was animated by the determination to found a free English State in Maryland, where all the rights and liberties of free Englishmen, which were then in great jeopardy in England, might be enjoyed and secured to the remotest posterity forever; that to do this he divested himself and his heirs of the princely prerogatives granted to him by his charter, and that he was wise enough and brave enough to see and declare that the code of laws and institutions guaranteeing individual rights which he had transplanted would be worthless without liberty of conscience.

Mr. F. Marion Crawford is, it is reported, preparing a course of lectures to be given in Boston in the autumn.

The latest volumes by American authors included in the Tauchnitz Library are Dr. Holmes's "Autocrat," Mr. Howells's "Undiscovered Country" and Mr. Crawford's "Mr. Isaacs."

The name of "P. Deming" attached to the pathetic story in The Atlantic is a real one. Mr. Deming is a reserved and studious gentleman who lives in Albany and occupies an official position in one of the courts.

Mr. Austin Dobson is editing a volume of Cowper's letters for the Parchment Library.

Mr. George Jacob Holyoake is bringing out in England a new journal under the title of "The Present Day."

The lectures which Mr. Freeman delivered in this country are about to be published in England.

Part second of the papers read before the American Association at Saratoga last year have just been issued in The Journal of Social Science. Cupples, Upham & Co., of Boston, and G. P. Putnam's Sons, New-York, are the publishers.

Mr. James Payn is writing a new story entitled "The Canon's Ward," which is to make its first appearance here in the pages of Harper's Bazar.

Harper's Magazine has made its way into Mexico and has been received there with enthusiasm. The Diario del Hogar says of Mr. Conant's poem of "Faustus" printed in the June number: "The poem is written with extraordinary power, and in a very elegant style. The engraving which accompanies it, and which forms a frontispiece of the magazine, is one of the most beautiful works we have ever seen, both in the character of the design and the delicacy of the engraving. It is a magnificent specimen of the perfection reached by the art of engraving at the present time."

Alexander Weill, for whose "Pictures of Alsatian Life and Manners" Heine wrote a preface in 1847, and who enjoyed the poet's confidence to an unusual degree, has just published in Paris a volume entitled "Souvenirs intimes d'Henri Heine." Some hitherto unpublished facts regarding Heine's wife, whose death occurred only a short time ago, are given which throw a curious light upon the relations of this queer couple. Disputes ending with blows were not wanting. "Every once in a while," Weill says, "Heine would say to me: 'My wife will have to have another beating.' The day chosen for the execution of the irate husband's threat was generally Monday. As a preliminary he would draw down the shades of the window and then begin with his helpless fists to pummel the fair shoulders of Mathilde: 'Take this for this and that word, and this for some other fault.' Mathilde, much stronger than her husband, allowed herself to be beaten and would only reply whimingly: 'Was ever such a man seen that beats his poor wife! Weill, why don't you come and help me?' Heine would only laugh and continue to beat her. All of a sudden with a wild howl she would sink down on the floor, dragging her husband with her, and the two would scream and roll over and over on the carpet. Once or twice I could not help saying to the two: 'Are you not ashamed to quarrel and fight in this manner like two dogs?' and then I would go away. When they had fought enough a reconciliation generally followed, the price of which was always either a bonnet, a shawl or a cloak."

PUBLISH THIS DAY:

THE CONCLUDING VOLUMES OF THE SERIES,

THE NAVY IN THE CIVIL WAR.

In three duodecimo volumes, with maps and plans. Price per volume, $1. Per set $3.

II.—THE ATLANTIC COAST.

By Rear-Admiral Daniel Ammen, U. S. Navy.

Admiral Ammen's history of the naval operations on the Atlantic coast, from 1861 to the close of the war, describes the active work of the navy in attacking the defensive strongholds of the Confederacy from Hampton Roads to Florida Keys. It includes a full account of the long siege of Charleston and the scarcely less arduous operations against Fort Fisher, the capture of Hatteras Inlet, Roanoke Island, and Newbern, and other minor movements along the coast.

III.—THE GULF AND INLAND WATERS.

By Commander A. T. Mahan, U. S. Navy.

The achievements of the naval forces on the Mississippi and it tributaries, and on the gulf and the Red River, either independently or in co-operation with the Army, form one of the most thrilling chapters in the history of the Civil War. The record of these exploits is filled with acts of daring, marvellous escapes, and terrific encounters. Commander Mahan has done full justice to this side of his narrative, but he has given at the same time a record of this part of the war that has greater claims to historic value than any which have preceded it.

ALREADY PUBLISHED:

I.—THE BLOCKADE AND THE CRUISERS.

By Professor J. Russell Soley, U. S. Navy.

"Naval engagements, even more than Army operations, lend their power to dramatic description, and the accounts of the most prominent incidents of our naval operations during the war lose nothing of their effect in the hands of Professor Soley."—[Army and Navy Journal.

GETTYSBURG TO THE RAPIDAN.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC FROM JULY, 1863, TO MARCH, 1864. By Andrew A. Humphreys, Brevet-Major-General, U. S. A., etc. 1 vol. 12mo, with maps, 75 cents.

This volume, while not connected directly with the series of war histories just completed, forms a connecting link between the account of the battle of Gettysburg and General Humphreys's history of the Virginia Campaign of 1864 and '65. The retreat of Lee from Pennsylvania followed by Meade, and the various strategic operations of both armies prior to General Grant's taking command of the Union forces, have never been satisfactorily described. General Humphreys's book throws light upon much that has hitherto been obscure or unaccounted for. For Army officers especially it will have unusual interest and value.

NEW-YORK MILITARY ACADEMY.

FORT WASHINGTON, N. Y.

Established 1854.

Superintendent JOHN B. HAYS, M. D.

REOPENS SEPT. 4, 1882.

A Boarding School of the highest grade, whose three-fold end, and scrupulously followed, is to mould, at an early age, the intellect of youth by science, the will by obedience, and the feelings by religion; never separating these three great requisites, instruction, discipline, religion, while aiming for every profession.

Situated on Washington Heights, about ten miles up the Hudson. It is reached by the Sixth Avenue Elevated Road to 168-st. Carriages are always in waiting, or, by timely notification, the superintendent meets the arrival of any train.

A more beautiful and healthy place—on an eminence commanding the most delightful scenery—or more attractive surroundings, are not found along the far-famed banks of the Hudson. Its buildings are unusually homelike.

There are forty acres of land attached to it, shaded and intersected by oak groves, affording ample space for playgrounds.
