A CHILD'S DAY: Unpublished Sketches by ADRIEN MARIE. Folio. New-York: J. W. Bouton & Co.

From Mademoiselle Lili's awakening in her crib, to the evening hour when she again falls fast asleep there is hardly a phase of happy, innocent child life which M. Adrien Marie's cunning pencil has not caught quickly and sympathetically and transferred to this charming series of sketches. They reveal something more than a skilful technique on the part of the artist; they show him possessed of powers of observation almost as keen and subtle as a mother's intuitions. It is easy to believe that M. Marie is the companion of his children, and that, regarding them as a father as well as an artist, his work from his vivacious models is purely a labor of love. No phase of their life, no change of mood, is strange to him. In looking at the productions of his pencil we feel that here is one who knows whereof he treats. We see the joys and sorrows of childhood reproduced with a grace and lightness of touch which would compel admiration from the most hardened landlord who ever displayed the sign "Children and dogs not wanted." M. Marie's accuracy in drawing is well worth commendation but we think rather of results than methods as we follow Mademoiselle Lili with her dog and cat to déjeuner, are permitted a glimpse of her experiences dans la baignoire, endure with her the trials of lessons and the toilette, and are rewarded by sharing her recreations and dinner. The twenty pages of sketches included in this book have been reproduced in Dujardin heliogravures. A few toward the end, as Le coucher, are less satisfactory than could be wished. But the work will add to M. Marie's laurels now as an illustrator and leads us to hope that he will chronicle the experiences of his younger child in the half-promised "Adventures of the New-born." If so we trust that it may meet with as sumptuous treatment at the hands of the publishers as has "A Child's Day."

RED-LETTER DAYS ABROAD. By JOHN L. STODDARD. With Illustrations. (Boston: James R. Osgood & Co.)

Mr. Stoddard has gathered together for publication in this volume three lectures, viz., "Travels in Sunny Spain," "The Passion Play at Ober-Ammergau in 1880," and "The Cities of the Czar." These papers are illustrated by a considerable number of very good engravings. The making of the book is in fact unexceptionable, and the only cause for surprise consists in the circumstance that it should have been thought worth while to reprint the text, for it has very little permanent merit. The most trying and depressing of all books of travel are those in which the traveller is perpetually on the strain in an effort to be amusing. Mr. Stoddard does not appear to possess any natural gift of humor, and consequently his sallies are rather elephantine and ponderous than light and frisky. The story of the Passion Play at Ober-Ammergau is more seriously and therefore better told than the adventures in Spain and Russia. But on the whole it is a pity that so much skill of draughtsman, engraver and printer should have been bestowed upon a volume having so poor a raison d'être.

A SYLVAN CITY. Illustrated. (Philadelphia: Our Continent Publishing Company.)

This volume contains a number of essays upon what the sub-title calls "Quaint Corners in Philadelphia." A good deal of local erudition is displayed in the papers, which, to the patriotic Philadelphian especially, will be extremely interesting, while the stranger that is without the gates may also derive satisfaction from their perusal. The opinions expressed by some of the writers concerning the present intellectual status of Philadelphia are not a little frank, to say the least, and it is probable that had similar views been taken by outsiders they would have been resented. Perhaps, however, the people of the Quaker City like being told that they have fallen into stagnation and have no longer any idea of progress.

CLASSIC HEROIC BALLADS. Selected by the Editor of "Quiet Hours." (Boston: Roberts Brothers.)

The object of the editor, as stated in the preface, has been "to bring together from many sources the best and most stirring ballads of heroism and adventure, such as children—and, indeed, people of all ages—are always eager to hear." The selection is judicious and catholic, and while many readers may miss some particular ballad which they prefer, it is doubtful whether, in a volume of this size, it would have been possible to bring together a better collection of those stirring poems which the world, when not given over to hypocrisy, will always prefer to what is commonly called a higher class of poetry.
