FRIDAY, Sept. 5—P. M.

At the opening of business at the Stock Exchange this morning, there was a little hesitation in the speculation, and first and early prices showed some depression from last evening's figures. The sudden death of Secretary Folger exerted an unfavorable influence, or at least it was regarded as the introduction of an element of uncertainty; and, added to that, it was known before the board opened that in London the price of Central and Hudson had declined 1½ per cent. Yesterday's accumulation of stocks by some of the large traders, however, had been too great to permit any prolonged feeling of uneasiness or any extensive depression in values. Hence as soon as the first rush to sell was over the market found a strong support, the tide of speculation was turned, and for the remainder of the day there was a continuous, but intermittent, appreciation in values. The improvement was not confined to any one class of stocks, but although irregular it was general to the whole market. The temperature of New-York was favorable to the corn crop, and the common talk in connection with Stock Exchange transactions was "This is hot, but it is good for corn." The market was remarkably well handled all day, and the cliques of movers in it are entitled to a creditable notice for their brilliant success in establishing the higher range of values, because they did it without the lightest shadow what is called public buying. St. Paul with sales of 73,750 shares, after an early decline of ½ per cent to 83⅝, finally at 86⅛@86, shows an advance of 1⅞ per cent, and Northwestern, after an early decline of ⅛ per cent, and Rock Island, after an early decline of ⅛ per cent, and Rock Island, after an early decline of ⅛ per cent, and Rock Island
