THE LAIRD OF LAG. A Life Sketch. By ALEXANDER FERGUSSON, Lieutenant-Colonel. 8vo., pp., xix., 271. Edinburgh: Printed for David Douglas. New-York: A. D. F. Randolph & Co.

The Laird of Lag was the original of Sir Robert Redgauntlet in Scott's novel, and he has an evil eminence in Scottish history, along with Claverhouse and Dalyell, as a persecutor of the Covenanters. Sir Robert Grierson (to give him his proper name) was "a Tory gentleman of the old Malignant type, of a strange more common at a period prior to his own time; keen for the exercise of authority, whether the king's or his own; who could not be wrong as long as he had the royal sanction, seeing his 'Sovereign Lord the King was immediate under God within his own dominions,' according to a formula of an earlier period of the Stuart rule. With the idea of rebellion to be put down, litt'e thought had he for the enforcement of unjust law upon a people of stubborn strength of will and power of imagination, who believed themselves to be 'in secure alliance with the unseen but Supreme Power.'" This is the judgment of Colonel Fergusson, after a searching and apparently candid examination of the facts. It is certain, however, that popular traditions, of which this handsome volume gives an abundant and interesting record, justify the much worse character given to the terrible Laird of Lag (alias Redgauntlet) in Wandering Willie's Tale, in the novel. Some of the most striking of the legends relate to the old Laird's last sickness and death. He outlived the persecutions and the Stuart dynasty, and passed his final days at Dumfries, where he grew so fat that his corpse could not be carried down the winding staircase of his house and a part of the wall had to be demolished for the funeral. Toward the end he was so tormented with gout that relays of servants were kept passing buckets of water from the river to cool his burning limbs, but the moment his feet were plunged into the water it began to fizz and boil. He died on the last night of the year 1733 in the midst of a storm of indescribable horror, whea spectral ships from which issued the sounds of wi'd mirth, were seen on the tempest-tossed Solway. "When the funeral procession started, and had got some little way on the Galloway side of the Nith, it was found that the horses, with all their struggles, and dripping with perspiration from some mysterious cause, could move the hearse no further. Sir Thomas Kirkpatick, of Closeburn, the old friend and comrade of Lag (and his relative), who was believed to be deep in some branches of the Black Art, was one of the mourners. This gentleman, the stoutest of non-jurors, on this occasion swore a great oath that he would drive the hearse of Lag 'though — were in it!' and ordered a team of beautiful Spanish horses of his own harnessed in place of the others. Sir Thomas mounted and took the reins, when the horses instantly dashed off at a farious gallop that he could in no wise restrain, and abated naught of their headlong pace till they reached the churchyard of Duncore, where they suddenly pulled up—and died."

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. Whittier's new volume of verse will shortly be published by Houghton, Mifflin & co. It will contain all the poems he has written since the publication in 1883 of "The Bay of Seven Islands."

Bret Harte's latest story, "Snow-Bound at Eagle's," will shortly be issued in book form by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

William Morris's translation of the Odyssey—in the same metre as his version of the Æneid—is nearly completed.

Wilkie Collins says in The Pall Mall Gazette that he picks up the literature that happens to fall in his way and lives upon it as well as he can; and he adds that he has never got any good out of a book unless it interested him in the first instance. "It," he says, "you asked me to pick out a biographical work for general reading, I should choose (after Boswell's supremely great book, of course) Lockhart's 'Life of Scott.' Let the general reader follow my advice, and he will find himself not only introduced to the greatest genius that has ever written novels, but provided with the example of a man modest, just, generous, resolute and merciful; a man whose very faults and failings have been transformed into virtues through the noble atonement that he offered, at the peril and the sacrifice of his life." As to works of fiction Mr. Collins begs the reader to "last, not least, do justice to a greater writer, shamefully neglected at the present time in England and America alike, who invented the sea-story, and created the immortal character of 'Leather Stocking.' Read 'The Pilot' and 'Jack Tier'; read 'The Deerslayer' and 'The Pathfinder,' and I believe you will be almost as grateful to Fenimore Cooper as I am."

Mr. Oscar Wilde mentions among books that should not be read at all, "argumentative books and all books that try to prove anything"; and he expresses his amazement that Poe's works have been passed over in the lists of the best books. "Surely," he says, "this marvellous lord of rhythmic expression deserves a place!" If in order to make room for him it be necessary to elbow out some one else, I should elbow out Southey."

The Faculty of Political Science of Columbia College have arranged for the publication of a Political Science Quarterly, which is to be a review devoted to history, economics and jurisprudence. The first number, which will be published in March, will contain articles on "The American Commonwealth in the Twentieth Century," by Professor John W. Burgess; "Investigation by Committees of the Legislature," by F. W. Whitridge; "American Labor Statistics," by Professor Richmond M. Smith; and "The Conference at Berlin on the West-African Question," by D. De Leon. Ginn & Co. will be the publishers and the yearly subscription will be $3.

"Cæsar Birotteau," the third volume of Roberts Brothers' edition of Balzac, will shortly appear.

Mr. W. S. Gilbert's letter to the Harpers is mentioned by The London Truth as "foolish and intemperate"; and his critic adds: "Mr. Gilbert, the Americans should know, is a very amusing, but very cross-grained gentleman, whose infirmity of temper is always leading him into quarrels here, while his own view of his works is so exaggerated that he sincerely thinks that the Americans should read them on bended knees, and then send him their weight in gold for the privilege. The Americans should have erected statues to him in all their towns, and have begged him to draw on the public treasury for a few millions, or some such trifle, as an inadequate monetary recompense for his condescension in allowing them to benefit by his heaven-born genius."

A particularly fine copy of the first edition of the "Donciad" will be sold with the rest of the late Mr. W. J. Thoms's books next summer.

A French translation of "Daisy Miller" is passing, with the consent of the author, through La Revue Contemporaine.

Dr. Paul Radestock's work on "Habit and its Importance in Education" has been translated into English and will be published in this form by D. C. Heath & Co.

Lord Rowton, who not written any part of his proposed biography of Beaconsfield, is complaining that its interest will be much diminished by the recent publication of the Hebrew Premier's letters to his sister.

Roberts Brothers intend to bring out a complete edition of the novels of George Meredith, an English writer who is witty, acute and never trivial.

Mr. Browning is preparing a short introduction to each volume of his works, for a complete and uniform edition which will by and by be published. A thousand copies of the six volume edition were sold in England last year.

Dr. McCosh's paper on "Religion in a College—what place it should have"—will be published immediately by A. C. Armstrong & Son.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK.—The arrivals of Beeves the past week were 3,187 head more than last week, and 455 head less than the corresponding week last year.

The receipts on Wednesday were moderate, but all for the home market, and while the morning sales were about Friday's prices, after the opening of the market there was an easier feeling before the finish and the yards were not fully cleared. On Friday with but 75 car-loads, trade was slow all the morning, and prices ruled lower than on Wednesday, and a number of car loads had to go over. The trade in City Dressed Beef was quiet early in the week after Monday, and prices could not be advanced materially.

Advices from British Markets were a little more favorable and a slight advance in prices of Refrigerator Beef was reported, although trade continues depressed, and no signs are apparent of any marked improvement at present.

Calves have been in light supply, and prices have ruled fairly steady with no marked variation in selling rates of either Grassers or Veals.

With continued light receipts of Sheep and Lambs the market ruled very firm on Wednesday at a still further advance of ¼@¼c per lb., but on Thursday the feeling was weak, and closing sales were at a reduction of ¼@½c per lb. on all grades. The arrivals on Friday were more liberal and a dull trade resulted at a still further reduction of about ½c per lb, and the pens were not cleared. Saturday's market was a slow one at steady prices, coming dull.

The arrivals of Hogs have been lighter than last week, and the market developed a slight upward tendency, closing firm on Saturday at an advance of 10@15c over the previous week.

BEEVES—Receipts yesterday and to-day were 120 cars at Jersey City, 134 cars at 60th-st. and 12 cars at the new yards, making 146 head, against 5,555 head last Monday.

At 60th-st. 8 Bashman Beeves (at 10), cut loads, and stern & Martin, 32 cars, and these were only 15 head of local stock for sale. The arrivals at the new yards were for export alone.

Twelve cars of the Jersey City cattle were consigned direct to Schlachtbank, Hoboken, and with only about 110 cars for sale the offerings were extremely light for Monday. The market opened firm with a fair demand at an advance of about 10c over Friday's closing prices on recent to choice steers, but rough coarse cattle showed no more let improvement. The finish was dull, but nearly all the offerings were sold.

A few bright Steers sold down to $1 35@$4 45; but most of the sales of Common to Prime Bullocks were at the range of $4 10@$5 90, with choice bringing $6; and 24 Extra Prime cattle were sold at $6 30 (including 19 head 1,551 lb average, fourth by Hunnefinch's Sons and Bergen, of Ontario, at $6).

Dry Cows and Bulls sold at $2 50@$4; old Oxen and Stags at $3 75@$4 20 (4 fat Oxen at $5@$5 50).

No demand for export.

The Denmark cut off today with 223 live Cattle, and 1,300 quarters of beef. The Nevada will take out to-morrow 2,140 quarters of Beef and 200 carcasses of Mutton.
