LITERARY NOTES.

"Through the Long Day" is the somewhat affected title of Dr. Charles Mackay's autobiography now in process of construction.

Mr. Joaquin Miller has revised his poems for a London firm and intends to reprint them all as revised in "The Golden Era," the California magazine with which he is now connected.

The "Eminent Women" series is to include a sketch of Mrs. Siddons by Mrs. Kennard and a biography of Mme. de Stael by Miss Bella Hardy.

A volume of illustrated social sketches called "The Lorgnette" and prepared by S. W. Van Schaik and J. K. Bangs will soon be published by George J. Coombes. He will bring out at the same time Miss Adams's translation of Alfred Stevens's "Impressions on Painting."

The Rev. E. J. Hardy is the author of the book "How to be Happy Though Married."

The last complete set of the "American Catalogue" of 1876 has been sold at $60—more than double the original price.

"L'Immortelle" is the title of Alphonse Daudet's next novel. It deals with the Academy.

Miss Elizabeth Peabody, in spite of the infirmities of age, is preparing for the press a volume entitled "A Last Evening with Allston, and Other Papers."

Mr. Andrew Lang's forthcoming collection of short stories will be published under the title of "In the Wrong Paradise."

Mr. Watterson in a recent letter notes one of the advantages which the Swiss writer has over his American brother. "There is a color here," he says, "which we have not. The very names of the localities have a music in them. Take, for example, the possible opening of a Swiss and an American novel and note the contrast:

SWISS.	AMERICAN.
Midway between Villeneuve and Bouveret, as the sun was setting behind the crags of Territe, and the blue waters of Lake Leman reflected, like a mirror, all the hues of the rainbow, the gallant Count Casimir de Guise and the fair-haired Grizelda, daughter of Baron Rudolph von Gerolstein, the Austrian Ambassador, etc., etc., etc.	Midway between Lickskillet and Hell's Half-acre, as the sun was setting behind the poplars on Wild Cat, and the yellow waters of Higgins's millpond reflected, like a brass kettle, all the hues of the rainbow, the gallant Bill Simmons and the fair-haired Polly Ann, daughter of Squire Jeems McKissick, magistrate of that civil district, etc., etc., etc.

"The Pall Mall Gazette" makes the odd statement that Queen Victoria owns the finest set in existence of the autographs of the signers of the American Declaration of Independence.
