SATURDAY, March 5—P. M.

The early dealings in stocks were affected by the anticipation of another "bad" bank statement. The market opened about steady and afterward declined some fractions, but dullness was the prominent feature. The bank statement when issued proved to be "worse" than was anticipated in loss in cash and surplus reserve. It, however, had no disastrous effects on values. The lowest prices were made before its publication, and there was a general improvement after it. The bank statement reflects the operations of the last week, when money had been easy enough, and not the condition now. The late improvement, however, was small except in a few stocks. Western Union and Northwestern were conspicuous in the late gains. The market closed dull and strong.

Government bonds were quiet and steady at quotations as follows:

The weekly statement of bank averages is a smashing of a surprise because it gives a loss of $2,839,200 in cash. The greater part of this loss unquestionably is the result of operations in the week ended February 26. By the operations of the Sub-Treasury this week, including its receipts of $1,060,000 for exchange on St. Louis and Chicago, the banks lost $950,000. The loans are further expanded $1,074,100. The result of the statement is a loss to the surplus reserve of $2,304,900 and leaves it at $9,088,050.

The following compares the total statements of February 26 and March 5:
