LITERARY NOTES.

In a paper entitled "Memories of Some Contemporaries," the Hon. Hugh McCulloch will present in the next "Scribner" a series of reminiscences of many famous Americans. In this number Mr. James's story, "A London Life," will be concluded, and S. H. Malloch will describe "Scenes in Cyprus."

Until lately, we are reminded, the story of "Aladdin or the Wonderful Lamp" was conspicuous in its absence from all Eastern copies of the "Arabian Nights," whether in the Arabic original, or the Turkish, Persian, or Hindustani translations. By great good luck, M. Zotenberg, Keeper of the Oriental MSS. at the Bibliotheque Nationale, lately purchased two volumes of Arabic tales which were copied about the beginning of this century from a MS. written in 1703. In one of these was the long-lost original in Arabic of "Aladdin." A genuine Eastern version of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" does not, it is said, exist. Sir Richard Burton's recent version is a translation of a Hindustani version of Edward Forster's English translation from Galland's French.

Mrs E. D. E. N. Southworth still holds her public with unremitting success. One company alone has ordered from G. W. Dillingham 10,000 copies of her lurid tale, "The Hidden Hand." This was originally published in "The Ledger" a-many years ago.

Will it always be true of the great majority of men who write that they remain as poor as Job's proverbial turkey? So, in truth, declares Robert Louis Stevenson. "If," he says in the forthcoming "Scribner" "you adopt an art to be your trade, weed your mind at the outset of all desire for money. What you may decently expect if you have some talent and much industry, is such an income as a clerk will earn with a tenth or perhaps a twentieth of your nervous output."

A volume on "Typical New-England Elms and Other Trees" is in the press of Cupples & Hurd. The plates are photogravure reproductions of photographs and there are to be an Introduction and Notes by L. L. Dame.

THE PETROLEUM MARKET.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD AND RANGE OF PRICES.

The new week opened yesterday at the Consolidated Exchange with a quiet market in crude petroleum certificates. The business done at the Stock Exchange cannot be called large, but it bore a greater proportion to the trading at the oil board than is usually the case. A bearish temper seems to have developed among Wall Street operators and they sold with not a little freedom. There was no field news of importance and the movement against values rested upon the reduction of Saturday in the refined quotations. The significance given to this reduction is probably exaggerated, but it cannot be denied that it exerted an influence on crude operations, while predictions of a further lowering of refined were made by traders whose views on this point are no more valuable than those of any outside observer of the market. First prices for certificates were the best of the day, and from 86 5-8 cents there was a falling off to near 85 cents. A rally to 86 cents followed, but it lacked vim, and in the late dealings the market dropped to the lowest point of the day. There was no pressure of long goods, however, and the reaction cannot be called more than natural under the recent hesitation produced by realizations and renewed bear ventures. The West persists in maintaining an attitude of indifference or hostility to a bull campaign, and with the sustaining influence of an active export demand, lacking for the moment, the argument is made that speculative support can be drafted from no other direction. For the time being, perhaps, conservative operations may prove to be the wiser policy to follow, but the strength of the commercial outlook should not be miscalculated in any estimate of the probable extent of possible reaction. The market closed with quite a bearish sentiment among the average traders, but the tone is entitled to be called steady, although figures were near to lowest points.

The range of prices and the total dealings were as follows:

	Stock Exchange.	Consolidated.
Opening	86 3-8	86 5-8
Highest	86 1-2	86 5-8
Lowest	85 1-8	85
Final	85 1-4	85 1-4
Sales, barrels	586,000	887,000

Refined oil was unchanged at 7 5-8 cents per gallon, Abel test, at all ports.
