PICKED TO PIECES AT LAST.

AN OLD FRIEND OF THE ELEVATED ROADS.

A KNOTTY LEGAL POINT DECIDED AGAINST THEM IN THE FIGHT FOR THE STREETS.

The General Term of the Superior Court handed down yesterday the first decision of an appellate court on the point which has been repeatedly raised by the Elevated Railroad Company in suits brought against it for encroachments on streets, that the property-owners have no right or title in the streets laid out during the Dutch rule in New-York or in the land embraced within the limits of those streets. William J. Mortimer and Richard Mortimer recovered some time ago a heavy judgment against the railroad company because of damages to property in the Bowery. The case was appealed and Judges Truax and Freedman, before whom the appeal was argued, have handed down a decision affirming the original decision.

Judge Truax, in his opinion, holds that the Dutch never owned the fee in the streets and that the English never admitted that they did. The English always held that John and Sebastian Cabot were the first discoverers of this part of the country, and on this account, and not because of conquest from the Dutch, always claimed the right of possession. The purchase of Manhattan Island by the Dutch from the Indians gave the Dutch no right or title to it, as such a purchase could not be recognized in the United States courts. Judge Truax further says that the streets in question were never in the gift of the Dutch Government, and that before the Revolution the streets were bound by the rules of common law. During the Dutch possession the common law was temporarily suspended.

Judge Freedman concurs in this opinion and adds considerably more to the argument. He says that the point should not be decided by the international law of to-day. It is a question of authority between the State of New-York and the people of the State. The title of discovery by the English is superior to the Indian title. This is because the claim of the Dutch was questioned by the English from the start and was decided in favor of the English by the world. Therefore neither the Dutch nor Roman law ever prevailed in this State, and the common law of England must be deemed to be the source of all this country's law. The rights of owners of land abutting on streets laid out while the Dutch were in possession must therefore rest on the English common law. Under this law the presumption is that the property-owners owned the fee of a highway to its centre, and the rights of the public were those of simple easements.

SEEKING A DIVORCE AT NINETEEN YEARS.

Henry C. Botty, a lawyer, of No. 215 Broadway, applied yesterday before Justice Allen, in the Court of Common Pleas, for the appointment of William Eylers as guardian of Kate Mexiner, age nineteen, the wife of Charles Paul. On July 21, 1889, she was married to Paul by the Rev. Francis J. Schneider. She alleges that her husband has been untrue to her, and she asks for the appointment of a guardian for the purpose of beginning a suit for divorce.

NOT AN EX-PRESIDENT'S SON-IN-LAW.

MR. WILSON, OF CHICAGO, SURPRISES A LOT OF NEWSPAPER MEN.

There was considerable excitement at the pier of the French steamship line yesterday over the expected arrival of M. Daniel Wilson, son-in-law of ex-President Grevy, of France, and his wife. Newspaper men especially were anxious to see one who had played such a prominent part in recent French history. At first he was difficult to find, and a number of men were approached in the vain hope of receiving an affirmative answer to the question: "Are you Mr. Wilson?" With the aid of the steward, however, the search of the newspaper men was soon ended and a tall, fine-looking man dressed in a neatly-fitting suit of gray was pointed out as Mr. Wilson. All doubt was dispelled, also, when he acknowledged his identity at once in a good-humored way. The reporters felt still happier when in astonishingly perfect English he said that he was always friendly to the press, and would be glad to see them as soon as he had attended to his baggage.

During the intervening minutes Mr. Wilson received many words of praise. One reporter in particular declared that a man of his reputation and affability was "worth at least a column" in the paper which he represented. After this speech he was unanimously chosen spokesman. Mr. Wilson returned as promised, accompanied by his smiling and blushing wife, and was accosted at once by the spokesman.

"I should like to know in the first place, Mr. Wilson," he said, "what has brought you to this country?"

Mr. Wilson looked at him a moment askance. His brow darkened, his eyes lighted up as though something was becoming clear to him. At last, breaking out into a laugh, he answered:

"My dear sir, I believe you are after the wrong man, since I have been a citizen of Chicago for forty-six years. I am M. H. Wilson, of the Prairie City."

The rest of this statement need not be described. The spokesman, accompanied by his colleagues, retreated rapidly, and soon learned that a mistake in the initials on the other side of the ocean had caused the blunder. Daniel Wilson is still in Paris.

DR. LOOMIS IS DONE WITH THE ELIXIR.

Drs. Loomis and Byron, who have been experimenting with the Seven-Sequard elixir at the Loomis laboratory, in East Twenty-sixth-st., have announced that they will make no more trials with the fluid. Dr. Loomis will write an article for one of the medical journals, giving the result of his observations and investigation. Judged from the statements of the doctor at various times during his experiments, it is not difficult to guess the conclusions which he has reached. He had little confidence in the elixir to begin with, and his experiments failed to give him faith. It is uncertain when Dr. Loomis's article will be printed.

SWEEPING UP MR. CARR'S ROOMS.

At the office of Alfred Carr & Co., at No. 36 Pine-st., no sign was visible of the early return to New-York City of the bucket-shop proprietor, who is now in Orange, N. J., denying the stories recently circulated derogatory to his character. An elderly woman was sweeping piles of paper, broken glass and other debris into a heap for removal, and she declared that she had seen Mr. Carr, and that he would be at his office to-day. She volunteered the information that she didn't propose to put any furniture into the vacant, desolate rooms.

COLLECTOR ERHARDT RETURNS TO HIS DESK.

Collector Erhardt was back at his office in the Custom House yesterday, although he said two days of his vacation were still unexpired. The Collector was browned by his trip and said he had a fine time, but not having fished any he had no "fish story" to relate. He saw the President for one brief moment at a reception in Bar Harbor.

"There was one funny thing happened to me," said the Collector. "It was at a ball at Bar Harbor. The dancers were whirling and the revelry was at its height when a friend togged out in his dress suit came up and shook hands with me and said:

"'How glad you must be to get away from all office-seekers.'

"'Yes,' I said, 'I am.'

"'None of them has reached you here?' he asked.

"'Not one,' I said.

"'Well, here is a letter I've got recommending me for a place'—and there in the ball-room he pulled the letter out of his dress-coat pocket and gave it to me. I was caught totally unprepared."

A FLURRY ON THE COTTON EXCHANGE.

There was a revival of activity on the Cotton Exchange yesterday, the total amount of business being 80,000 bales. The early months showed a rise of from ten to twelve points. The strength was due to a rise equal to six points in Liverpool.

W. W. Wendler, of No. 46 Cotton Exchange, announced in the afternoon his inability to meet his liabilities, being caught in the rise. His failure is for a small amount, and created no effect on the Exchange.
