THE UNCOLLECTED WRITINGS OF THOMAS DE QUINCEY. With a Preface and Annotations by James Hogg. In two volumes. 12mo. pp. xx, 363; 357. Scribner & Welford.

Owing to the carelessness with which De Quincey scattered his essays and papers, and the difficulty with which, after the lapse of years, he re-collected them, together with the fact that the completion of his final revision was prevented by death, it has happened that not a few of his productions have hitherto escaped editorial pursuit, and have lain imbedded in the recesses of extinct periodicals and other obscure and unsuggestive places. Mr. James Hogg was editor of a magazine whose pretentious title—"The Titan"—did not preserve it from the common fate of insufficiently ballasted or unwisely conducted ventures of the kind. For nine years, however,—that is, from 1850 to 1859, when De Quincey died—the conductor of "Titan" was fortunate enough to be closely associated in literary work with the English Opium Eater, and in this way he acquired a direct knowledge of a considerable amount of De Quincey's writing not included in any edition of his works. The editing of De Quincey is both delicate and difficult, for he not only revised freely for final publication, but he was accustomed to use old matter over again, changing its form more or less and also its arrangement. Mr. Hogg believes that none of the papers in these volumes, if that on the "Casuistry of Duelling" be excepted, has appeared in any of the definitive editions. In regard to some of the articles, it must be said that it is doubtful whether their fugitive character does not properly exclude them from the author's collected works. These papers may be of value as studies of style, perhaps, but can hardly be said to possess permanent interest, so far as their subjects are concerned.

As regards most of the other essays and essaylets this objection cannot be raised, for they are inherently interesting. Mr. Hogg's first volume contains "A Brief Appraisal of the Greek Literature in its Foremost Pretensions," "The German Language and Philosophy of Kant," "Moral Effects of Revolutions," "Prefigurations of Remote Events," "Measure of Value," "Letter to Hazlitt on the Malthusian Doctrine of Population," an article on Ricardo, an abstract of Swedenborgianism, "Sketch of Professor Wilson," "The Lake Dialect," "Storms in English History," "The English in India," "On Novels," and "De Quincey's Portrait." Of these the "Appraisal of Greek Literature" is the longest. The articles on the German language and Kant, upon education, the sketch of Professor Wilson, the article "Storms in English History"—cast in the form of a review of Froude—and that on "The English in India" are very characteristic, full of De Quincey's peculiar charm, and altogether interesting. In the second volume are these papers: "The English in China," "Shakespeare's Text—Suetonius Unravelled," "How to Write English," "The Casuistry of Duelling," "The Love Charm," "Ludwig Tieck," "Last Will and Testament—The House of Weeping," "The Household Wreck," "Mr. Schnechenberger," and "Anglo-German Dictionaries." The first four of these are thoroughly De Quinceyan. The remainder are mostly translations from the German of Tieck and Richter; pieces of fiction belonging to a vanished literary period and state of the public taste, but not the less deserving of preservation. Lovers of De Quincey will welcome Mr. Hogg's collection, and the previously inedited papers therein will have to be included in all future editions of his complete works—beginning, it may be presumed, with the new collected edition at present in course of publication.

THE ORIGIN AND GROWTH OF THE ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. By Hannis Taylor. Vol. I. 8vo., pp. xi, 616. Boston and New-York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

In this work Mr. Taylor has undertaken an ambitious task—within the limits of two octavo volumes to unfold the story of the evolution of constitutional government from its rudimentary Teutonic form to its final development into the Federal system of the United States. But he has brought to the prosecution of the work indefatigable industry, a thorough familiarity with the whole range of constitutional history and philosophy and a lively enthusiasm that glows through every page of his writings. His central thought—that "the Government of the United States is not the result of special creation, but of evolution"—is not in itself novel. But the steps of the development, the processes of the evolution, are here traced and analyzed with a precision and completeness that promise to add much to the resources of the student of historical philosophy.

The present volume affords ample proof of the adequate equipment of the author for his task. At times the style is labored and Mr. Taylor shows an undue fondness of ponderous phrases and forms of expression; but the thought of the writer is always clear and his logic so joined to earnestness that these minor defects, if they really are defects, are easily forgotten. He carries the doctrine of political evolution to the utmost limits. The founders of the American Republic, he insists, were entirely unconscious of the extent to which, through their agency, the essential character of the English form of government was being reproduced by them in the Federal Constitution. If it had been a scheme of government devised by them, it could never have received the recognition of the American people, much less have successfully stood the test of experience. But the settlers along the Atlantic Coast from the Penobscot to the Gulf of Mexico brought with them to America the influences of the old forms of English constitutional government. They soon emerged from the first stage, namely that of subjection to a corporation created by royal authority, into the form of colonial government with an executive head, a judiciary and a legislative assembly whose limitations were prescribed by royal charter. When such a colony finally became an independent State it continued substantially the same form of government, substituting only a constitution for the royal charter; and in some instances even this change was one merely of name.

The requisition system upon which the confederation or league of the States was founded represented no advance and soon disclosed its weaknesses and impracticability. The exigencies of that occasion brought forth what Mr. Taylor considers "the most important and far-reaching political principle to which our career as a nation has so far given birth," namely, that the Federal head should operate directly on individuals and not on states. In the establishment of that principle by the construction of a "composite State," with its legislative, executive and judiciary departments, the framers of the Constitution were led, not by choice or voluntarily, but by the force of circumstances, into the reproduction of the English constitutional system in substantially the form in which it had reappeared in the several States.

For the complete demonstration of this conclusion, Mr. Taylor rightly believes that "the history of this later development cannot be severed from that of the earlier and more tedious process of growth which made it possible." The first part of the author's work contained in this first volume covers the time extending from the Teutonic conquest to the end of the Middle Ages—the period of "the making of the constitution." In his recital of the events of this period, Mr. Taylor has not discovered and has not sought to discover new fields of historical knowledge. But he has succeeded in presenting the course of events that constantly tend to the final development of the principles underlying our constitutional form of government, and shown so clearly their relation to the results, that every student of constitutional history will find in these pages new sources of profit and instruction, as well as pleasure.

COFFEE—Brazil growths on the spot had a moderate demand, at generally steady prices. No. 7 flat bean, quoted, 19c, and undesirable do. 18¾@18¾c. Sales, 500 bags No. 8, 17¾c; 500 bags No. 10 (from Europe), 16¾c; 2,500 bags No. 6 and 8, 19c, and 17¾c; 1,000 bags No. 4 and 5 Santos, 20¾c. Mild grades fairly active; sales, 800 packs Padang (December sale), 21¾@23c; 600 bags Savanilla, 600 bags Cora, 100 bags Java, 22¼c, and 400 bags Maracaibo, p. t. Options were variable and irregular, with a little more life to the speculation. Early in the day there was a decline of 5@10 points, but this was followed by freer buying, leading to a general rise. Late months showed most strength, closing 15@25 points higher. Near-by deliveries left off practically unchanged, as compared with yesterday. Cables were unsettled. Havre declined ¼ fr on near months, while late deliveries gained ¼@½ fr. Hamburg closed ⅛@¼ pfg. better on remote options. Clearances of Brazilian coffee from Hamburg for the United States during March, 14,000 bags. There were no Rio advices received to-day. Total sales here, 28,750 bags as follows:

FLOUR AND MEAL—FLOUR—City Mills extras sold a little more freely to-day, mainly for the West Indies, but apart from this the export demand was slow. Local jobbers were bought sparingly, and the general market ruled weak. Sales, 21,000 bbls, 6,000 for export, including 2,000 bbls Low Extra at $2 15@$2 35; 6,000 bbls City Mill at $2 40@$2 45; 2,000 bbls Minnesota Patents at $4 15@$4 25; 4,000 bbls Winter Wheat at $2 15@$4 [illegible]; 500 bbls Superfine at $2 15@$2 30; 1,100 bbls Fine at $1 70@$2 00. SOUTHERN FLOUR—Less active and rather weak. Sales, 1,000 bbls. Common to fair extra, $2 [illegible]@$2 [illegible]; good to choice do, $2 [illegible]@$2 [illegible]. RYE FLOUR—Fairly active at full prices. Sales, 700 bbls. Superfine at $2 [illegible] for to choice, $3 10@$3 25; fancy, $3 [illegible]@$3 [illegible]. CORN MEAL—Lower and more active. Sales, 1,000 bbls. Western Meal at $2 10@$2 15, and Brandywine, $2 15. Sales, 1,100 bbls including 700 bbls Brandywine.

GRAIN—WHEAT—Was weight falling off in speculative dealings to-day, and the greater portion of the trading was credited to Wall street, partly in the shape of the form; yet the dealings can up to quite a considerable sum. No new features were developed, and prices all day kept within the range of Friday's ruling week and then to further advance. At one period the market was affected by cables hinting to a permanent local operator and considerable buying followed. Foreign advices were generally strong, and there were also large weekly clearances of wheat, both of which contributed to the early advance. Crop advices, however, were rather more favorable while the Northwestern movement continued fair, and export inquiry slow, all of which serves to show the upward tendency. Advices at interior points to-day were 1c@2c higher, and 22,100 bushels were taken up and forwarded to Buffalo. Receipts were 98,857 bushels and Tuesday 106,000 bushels, leaving in Baltimore. On the 60th May closed at 87½c. The spot market ruled firm at the outset, but closed weak, owing to the reaction in options. About 12,000 bush went to shippers, and millers took two loads, 6,720,000 bush future, 30,000 bush spot. Quotations: No. 1 Hard Spring, 1,000 bush spot, closing at 90c; Hard Winter, 87c; No. 2 Red, 87¼@87¾c; state, nominal; afloat, No. 1 Northern spring quoted 90c@[illegible]; No. 2 April, closing at 87¼c; do May, 87 7-16@87¾c, closing at 87½c; do June, 88 1-16@88 3-16c, closing at 88½c; do July, 84¼@85c, closing at 84½c; do August, 84⅛@84½c, closing at 84½c; do September, 84 3-16@84⅜c, closing at 84½c; do October, closing at 85½c; do November, closing at 86½c; do December, 87¼@87⅝c, closing at 87½c. RYE—In fair demand, but generally steady. Western, in boatloads, quoted at 56@57c; State, 57@57½c; Canada, nominal. BARLEY—Quiet but very firm. Sales, 10,000 bush Ungraded Canada, private. Two-rowed State quoted 62c@65c; Six-rowed do, 55@60c. Extra Canada, 62c. Malt—No sales reported. BARLEY MALT—In fair request at full late prices. CORN—Options were again quite active, though somewhat unsettled. Early in the day there was a rise of 1@2c, with renewed buying by "shorts," but the close showed a slight reaction on all months. Receipts were somewhat smaller, and cable advices continued strong, both of which had a stimulative effect at the outset. Western mixed sold here at 58½c, delivered, and 58½c was the important. Export demand was less general, only 50,000 bush taken here and 50,000 bush at out ports.
