TEACHERS AT CHAUTAUQUA.

EDUCATORS OF NATIONAL PROMINENCE LEAD THE WORK.

THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS—DEPARTMENTS OF ENGLISH LITERATURE, FOREIGN LANGUAGES, HISTORY AND CHEMISTRY—CLASSIFICATIONS OF STUDENTS.

Chautauqua, N. Y., July 17.—The exercises at Chautauqua are divided into two classes. The public programme provides entertainment and instruction daily to all the people, and includes courses of lectures, Sunday sermons, single addresses, concerts, stereopticon exhibitions, etc.; the educational system is distinct and comprises the College of Liberal Arts, Teachers' Retreat, School of Sacred Literature, School of Music, School of Physical Education and many special classes, as photography, Delsarte, cooking, the kindergarten, china painting, tapestry painting, wood-carving, typewriting, stenography, penmanship and bookkeeping, drawing and painting, industrial drawing, elocution and oratory. William R. Harper, president of the University of Chicago, is principal of the Chautauqua College of Liberal Arts and of the Schools of Sacred Literature.

PRESIDENT HARPER.

The department of history is conducted by Professor Moses Coit Tyler, the course having special reference to the planting of the English Colonies in America, the political institutions of the Colonies and the remoter causes of the Revolution. Professor Tyler in his class work applies modern methods of historical research to get hold of the real facts, to recognize the historic significance of classes of facts, and to examine and collate facts in a dispassionate spirit. The result of this method of dealing with history is to eliminate myths and to secure a truthful basis for historic generalizations, and a non-partisan treatment of every question. An obstacle to truth and justice in the study of the history of our own country is what Herbert Spencer calls "the bias of patriotism." Professor Tyler recognizes the need of applying to this study the disinterested spirit of science, and that the application of this spirit constitutes one of the great disciplinary advantages in the study of American history. Love of country is thereby intensified because it is based upon the soundest reasons.

PROFESSOR M. C. TYLER.

Moses Coit Tyler was born in Connecticut in 1835 and graduated at Yale in 1857. He is a clergyman of the Episcopal Church and frequently preaches. He has been engaged in college work most of his life, was professor at the University of Michigan from 1867 to 1881, since which time he has been professor of American history at Cornell University. Professor Tyler has been a frequent writer for magazines and newspapers, and is the author of a "History of American Literature," in two volumes, of "A Manual of English Literature" and of "The Life of Patrick Henry." Besides classes in the regular college, Professor Tyler began to-day a course of public lectures on the University Extension plan.

The classes in mathematics are conducted by Professor William Hoover. Algebra is taught through quadratic equations. Of plane geometry the first three books are studied, and a course in plane trigonometry, including practice in logarithmic computation is given. It is the effort to make the study of mathematics pleasing and to emphasize its advantages. The work is thorough and the classes are well practiced in the fundamental principles. Many teachers attend the classes to study methods and plans of teaching. Professor Hoover is from Ohio University at Athens.

Mrs. P. L. McClintock, formerly of Wells College, has charge of the department of Old English. The idea in the teaching of Old and Middle English is to emphasize the continuity of the English speech, consequently the work is made to bear constantly upon the language of to-day. As a basis for the study of Anglo-Saxon or Old English, the students read during the six weeks of the college session about 120 pages of prose and 500 lines of poetry. The study of Middle English is based upon Chaucer's General Prologue and the Knight's Tale from the Canterbury Tales. Mrs. McClintock, besides this summer work, has charge of the Chautauqua correspondence class in Old English, which last year numbered 105 students. Mrs. McClintock is a young woman of marked ability and success in her work. In addition to these classes, which take ten hours a week, Mrs. McClintock manages her summer home in the grove east of the college and cares for two little nestlings, both under three years of age. Her husband, Professor W. D. McClintock, is at present in Europe engaged in study, and will, upon his return, take the chair of English literature in the new University of Chicago.

Professor Joseph Henry Gilmore has charge of English Literature. Professor Gilmore was born in Boston and graduated from Phillips Academy, Brown University and Newton Theological Institute. He was successively teacher of Hebrew, pastor of a Baptist church, secretary to his father, Governor Gilmore, of New-Hampshire, and editor of "The Concord Daily Monitor." Since 1868 he has been professor of Rhetoric, Logic and English, in the University of Rochester. Professor Gilmore is the author of "The Art of Expression," "The English Language and Its Early Literature," and other works of a high order. He is, perhaps, most widely and favorably known as the author of the hymn, "He Leadeth Me," which has been translated into many languages. Professor Gilmore has for some years lectured extensively on literary topics before schools, colleges and literary clubs, and anticipitated in his public lectures and class-room work the methods which are now recognized as characteristic of the University Extension movement. He has been a frequent contributor to "The New-York Examiner" and other papers, and for some years past he has been actively engaged in Y. M. C. A. work, especially among railroad men.

Professor Starr W. Cutting has the direction of the department of German language and literature, assisted by Professor Henry Cohn. Professor Cohn comes from the Chicago School of Languages and is an efficient and enthusiastic teacher. The elementary classes are still large and they are visited by many teachers, who find an advantage in observing the conduct of the work and an object-lesson in teaching. The intermediate and advanced classes in language and literature have greatly increased in numbers and in interest. The students are American and German-American. There are large classes in Schiller, Heine, advanced prose composition and sight-reading, besides a class engaged in translating High German poetry of Walther von der Vogelweide into modern German. Professor Cutting graduated from Williams College in PROFESSOR J. H. GILMORE.

1881 and became principal of the Deerfield Academy, Mass. He resigned five years later and studied for two years at the University of Leipzig. In 1888 he accepted the chair of German and French in the University of South Dakota. Two years later he entered Johns Hopkins University, from which he received the degree of Ph. D. From Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., Professor Cutting will enter the University of Chicago this fall as assistant professor of German.

In the department of French language and literature Professor A. de Rougemont and Mlle. Lea R. de Lagnean are the instructors. There are eight classes. The classes in old French are large, as also in literature. There is a French circle which meets every afternoon, when historical and literary subjects are discussed in French. A game of French authors and singing are features of these meetings. The classes recite twice a day. Many of the students take their meals at a French table where only that language is spoken.

R. W. HALL.

The department of preparatory Latin has the largest number of pupils, there being eighty in daily attendance. Professor Lewis Stuart, of the Lake Forest University, assisted by Professor Charles Horswell, from Northwestern University, and F. J. Miller, of Yale, are in charge. There are classes in both elementary and advanced Latin. The students begin with the first sentence of Caesar and several chapters are thoroughly studied, the principles being taught as they present themselves. In the advanced classes special attention is given to the subject of syntax, distinctive qualities of oratory are emphasized, and the history of Cicero and his age presented in topical recitations. Professor Miller's new "Inductive Virgil" is the class-book used in the study of Virgil's Aeneid. In this class there is a critical translation, rapid translation, and inductive study of the principles of versification. The department of college Latin comprises classes in the Odes, Satires, and Epistles of Horace, Cicero's Orations, Livy and Ovid, and illustrated lectures on the private life of the Romans.

Professor C. P. Castle, now of Bucknell University, who will go to the University of Chicago, is the instructor in preparatory Greek. There are two recitations a day by these classes. Twelve weeks work is done during the college term. Four books of the Anabasis are read. The inductive method is used with special reference to the study of moods and tenses, and the acquisition of a vocabulary. In the department of college Greek Professor Rufus B. Richardson has classes in Homer and in Greek oratory. The composition of the Homeric poems is studied. Portions of the oration of Aeschines against Ktesiphon and of the oration of Demosthenes "On the Crown" will be read. Professor Richardson was formerly Director of the American School at Athens, and is now of Dartmouth College. Professor Thomas D. Seymour will begin July 28 classes in the Greek drama, in Greek readings of the "Persians of Aeschylus and the "Medea" of Euripides, and in Herodotus.

Professor Frederick Starr has charge of the department of geology, mineralogy and anthropology. The work in geology is advanced in character. The section of dynamical geology forms the subject for this year. The instruction is given in lectures, and the work of the class-room is supplemented by weekly excursions to points of interest. These excursions have formed a feature in the work of this department for the past five years. The points to be visited this year are the gravel hills of Jamestown, the gorge at Eighteen-Mile Creek, the Lake Erie shore at Barcelona, the reservation at Irving, the Buffalo quarries and Niagara Falls. In mineralogy the instruction is elementary and gives ability to determine common minerals. Professor Starr's specialty is anthropology, and it is the subject in his department which attracts the greatest number of students. Professor Starr is known to New-Yorkers from his lectures given at the American Museum of Natural History, with which he was for two years connected.

In the departments of physics and chemistry are Professors J. T. Edwards, L. H. Batchelder and Robert Hall. The work is included in eight divisions. The rooms are fitted with all essentials for successfully conducting these studies. The students are generally teachers in schools of the higher grades, and are at once enthusiastic and hard working. Dr. Edwards has been connected with this work at Chautauqua for ten years. He is principal of Chamberlain Institute and a member of the New-York Senate. Dr. Edwards has just published "The Silva of Chautauqua Lake," a beautifully illustrated book on the trees of Western New-York. Professor Batchelder is professor of chemistry in Hamline University at Minneapolis, Minn., and has been a member of the Chautauqua faculty for three years.

Professor Hall, son of the Rev. Dr. John Hall, of New-York, is professor of organic chemistry in the University of the City of New-York, and is here for the first time, a valued addition to the faculty.

Professor Richard T. Ely, of Johns Hopkins University, will begin instruction in the department of political science and social science on July 27. The distribution of wealth will be examined. Rent, wages, interest and profits, combinations of labor and capital will be discussed, and education, profit-sharing and socialism.

In the department of psychology Professor J. G. Schurman, the new president of Cornell, will give from August 1 a course of lectures outlining the substance of the contemporary science of the mind, and four lectures on fundamental ethical questions.

The enrolment of students for the summer term of '92 is about 350, a larger number than in any previous year at the corresponding time. Two-thirds of the students are teachers by profession, the remainder are students preparing for college, college students taking special courses, parents who are studying to help their children, etc. Presbyterians and Methodists lead in the religious denominations. The teacher-students are from universities, colleges, academies, high schools, normal schools, denominational schools and public and private schools. Twenty of the highest institutions in the country are among those which send students this year, and every State in the Union, besides Canada and foreign countries, are represented.

THE PENNSYLVANIA CHAUTAUQUA.

Mount Gretna, Penn., July 17 (Special).—The gates were closed here to-day, but a number of visitors arrived on trains stopping at the grove Saturday night. Devotional exercises were held in the morning and were well attended. The services were led by the chancellor, the Rev. Dr. Max Hark, and the Rev. George B. Stewart, president of the Chautauqua. At 6:30 p. m. a service of song was held in the main auditorium. At 8 o'clock devotional exercises were again held in Chautauqua Hall, presided over by Dr. Hark. Generally the day was spent by the Chautauquans in a quiet manner. Those who occupy cottages on the United Brethren camp-meeting grounds, outside the Chautauqua tract, were deprived of the privilege of attending the services of the day, as the gates were closed, but they could visit Camp McClelland and roam the mountains, while those inside the gates could not.

THE PETROLEUM MARKET.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD AND RANGE OF PRICES.

The June report of the Pennsylvania pipe lines showed an increase in net stocks of 595,060 barrels, and of that increase 425,426 barrels went into an expansion of National Transit certificates, compared with the preceding month. The June gain in stocks was even greater than the increase in May, and appeared to come from a sharp falling off in deliveries, rather than an increase in receipts, although these were somewhat larger than in May. The net stocks, compared with June, 1891, are larger by 7,024,435 barrels, and the National Transit certificates are increased 3,508,856 barrels. Following are the pipe line reports for the last two months and for June, 1891:

Penn., W. Va., etc.	June, 1891.	May, 1892.	June, 1892.
Receipts	2,433,992	2,694,729	2,682,934
Deliveries	2,128,369	2,274,429	2,105,319
Excess receipts	305,623	420,291	577,615
Daily average receipts	81,133	86,926	89,461
Daily average deliveries	70,945	73,369	70,177
Excess av. receipts	10,188	13,557	19,284
Net stocks	11,252,400	17,681,829	18,276,895
Nat. Transit certificates	2,297,039	5,380,403	5,805,859

When the pipe-line figures are compared with those of previous months of the year, there will be found the same persistent characteristics of accumulating stocks. The production in 1892 has been sustained at remarkably steady figures, while the deliveries are running down, as they should not do, if a hopeful view of the future is to be taken. The net stocks are now nearly 7,000,000 barrels in excess of the amount on hand a year ago and 8,000,000 barrels in excess of June, 1890. The following tables show the net stocks, the runs and the deliveries of the first six months of the last three years:

The Buckeye (Lima) Pipe Line report again reflected a declining tendency in stocks and there was a smart decrease in the amount of outstanding certificates. The Ohio fields still present the picture of consumption only stripping the output, in sharp contrast with Pennsylvania where over-production is the feature. We append the Buckeye (Lima) Pipe Line figures from January 1, 1892:

The partial returns of the Pennsylvania pipe lines for the first two weeks of July show a daily average in runs of 69,574 barrels, against full averages of 77,414 barrels in July, 1891; 81,420 barrels in 1890, and 93,117 barrels in July, 1889. The deliveries have averaged 65,318 barrels, against 69,727 barrels in July, 1891; 81,595 barrels in 1890, and 84,776 barrels in 1889. The crude certificate market retained its professional aspect last week, with the dealings showing a waning disposition. Prices were remarkably steady, considering the depression in the foreign refined markets and the rise in the output of the McDonald field. The transactions were devoid of significance throughout, and the closing was stagnant.

The range of prices and the total dealings in National Transit certificates at the Stock Exchange and the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange for the last two weeks were as follows:

	Stock Exchange.		Consolidated.
Week ended—	July 9.	July 16.	July 9.	July 16
Opening	52⅞	51⅞	53⅛	53
Highest	52⅞	51⅞	53⅛	53⅛

Final	51⅞	51⅞	52⅞	52⅞
Sales, barrels	19,000	10,000	100,000	95,000

Refined petroleum was unchanged at 6 cents per gallon in barrels and 3.50 cents in bulk at New-York, and 5.95 cents in barrels, and 3.45 cents in bulk, at Philadelphia and Baltimore. Cases were 6.80 cents a gallon. Crude oil was unchanged at 4.00 cents in barrels and 2.90 cents in bulk, with Washington crude 50 points under those quotations.

Foreign quotations declined to 13⅞ francs per 100 kilos at Antwerp, 5.65 marks per 50 kilos at Bremen, and 4s 9d, per Imperial gallon at London.
